HITLER SEES WARSAW RUIN

Tours Polish Debris After Penning Talk

By PIERRE J. HUSS
International News Service Staff Correspondent

BERLIN, Oct. 5—Adolf Hitler visited his newest provincial capital today—shell-raked, bomb-gutted, debris-laden Warsaw, in the course of a closely guarded tour of occupied Polish areas.

Before leaving Berlin in his private airplane to inspect the latest territories to be garnered into the greater Reich, Hitler put the finishing touches to the 10,000-word speech he will deliver to the Reichstag tomorrow at noon (6 a.m. Boston time).

An hour before leaving Berlin, Hitler finished the text of his momentous address, in which he is expected to outline the terms of his "peace offensive."

The visit took Hitler to the wrecked Warsaw airport, the gutted municipal center of the city, the bombed main railway station and through streets from which the debris had been cleared away only sufficiently to enable his motor cavalcade to pass.

CLOSELY GUARDED

Strictly guarded every step of the way, Hitler took time to confer with the commanding officers who led the onslaught against Warsaw and who still have the city under military control.

He crossed the Vistula river and looked at the suburb of Praga, where some of the heaviest fighting took place, but it was considered doubtful that he would go fifty miles farther eastward to inspect the new Russian line formed there.

Meanwhile, as speculation ran high over the possible tenor of Hitler's speech, international difficulties over the rights of neutral merchant shipping occupied attention in Berlin.

HUNT DOWN ALL REDS IN FRANCE

By KENNETH T. DOWNS
International News Service Staff Correspondent

PARIS, Oct. 5—France, awaiting a German offensive due in about a week, today launched an internal drive to stamp out every vestige of Communsm lest the Reds weaken the country's defenses.

Highest officials of the outlawed Communist party—even the 43 former Communist members of the Chamber of Deputies—faced prosecution. Reds were removed from Paris public offices and purged from labor unions, including the General Confederation of Labor, which itself was formerly on the extreme leftist side.

News of the Communist hunt submerged war reports, since military activity was virtually at a standstill as France waited for the first German stroke, now that Premier Daladier had spiked the Reich's "peace offensive."

Daladier's major stroke against the Communists came with arrangements to close Parliament. Thus the Red deputies were driprived of parliamentary immunity.

"Arrest of Communist chiefs is near," said headlines in the Paris Soir. "Police operations have been under way since last night in Paris and its suburbs," the supporting article declared.

"Purge of the C. G. T. (Confederacion Generale du Travail) are increasing. Arrests today appear to be an entirely normal and necessary result of recent treasons."

The "treason" referred to involved the arrest of 30 persons who signed a pamphlet urging "immediate peace." Communist deputies are to be prosecuted for writing a letter to President Herriot of the Chamber of Deputies advocating a peace drive.

They reported that 13 United States soldiers boarded the ship at the Pacific entrance to the canal and made the trip through the locks.

The soldiers carefully examined the ship, incIding the engine room.

MOVES OF EUROPE'S NATIONS IN WAR CRISIS

IT WAS "all quiet on the western front" today as Europe waited Hitler's "peace" terms. France frankly announced it thought the bid a "trap," while England waited some overture. Italy kept a "hands off" policy. Holland and Belgium guarded borders against possible Nazi thrust. Sweden sought some arrangement to stop Nazi seizure of ships. Russia, meanwhile, completed pacts with Estonia and Latvia.

War Diary

35th Day

Behind the Front—Although Adolf Hitler was expected tomorrow to make known, officially, his basis for possible peace, it was emphasized in Berlin that what he intended to say was a profound secret. London eagerly waited his speech which will be delivered before the Reichstag at noon (6 a. m. E. S. T.) Meantime Der Fuehrer was in Warsaw indulging himself in a "Roman triumph" entry into that ruined city. H. R. Knickerbocker, I. N. S. war correspondent, says the Nazi war plan—if peace fails—calls for a stroke through Holland for warplane bases from which to conduct an aerial war against England. In Paris Communists have been purged. Announcement is made of the signing of a mutual assistance pact between Russia and Estonia which gives the Soviets access to quarter troops and naval forces in the North Baltic. In Washington, Administration Senators lined up against a proposal of Senator Tobey of New Hampshire to split the neutrality bill and delay the arms embargo fight until restrictions on American shipping could be enacted.

On the Sea—Sinking of two more neutral ships brought the toll to 19 for non-belligerent nations in the present war. A Norwegian transport was sunk by a mine off Singapore, while the Greek steamer Diamantis was sunk off the coast of Ireland. Word was awaited from Paris as to the identity of the German freighter reported captured by a French submarine and taken to a French port. A Berlin newspaper reported that the crew of the Bremen, mysteriously missing since her departure from New York at the war's outbreak, returned to Bremershaven last Friday after docking the ship in an undisclosed neutral port.

On the Land—Diplomatic negotiations among the powers again today tended to slow up actual warfare, although an official French communique issued this morning declared that there was "intermittent artillery actions at different points on the front," failing however, to disclose the locations. Meanwhile, the French sought improved positions on the Western Front to thwart a possible German offensive.

In the Air—The weather played its part in the war today as autumnal rains kept all planes grounded with slight expectation of aerial warfare from any direction in the near future.

HINT HALF OF SUBS DESTROYED

LONDON, Oct. 5 (INS)—While belief grew in well-informed British circles that half of the German U-boat fleet has already been destroyed in the first five weeks of war, Great Britain today expressed its full approval of the Panama conference plan for a wide "sea safety belt" around the Americas.

(Editor's Note — This dispatch was passed by the British censors in its present form. A cable was immediately sent from New York to London asking details and substantiation of the belief that half of the German submarine fleet had been sent to the bottom. In reply came this message from London:

"It is not permitted to embellish the 50 per cent claim or to handle it differently than written.")

(By the Associated Press)

Sinking of two more neutral vessels has brought to 62 the number of ship reported sunk since the beginning of the European war.

The gross tonnage destroyed, exclusive of cargo, mounted to 256,296.

The Hoegh Transporter, 4914-ton Norwegian vessel, was reported to have sunk Tuesday after hitting a mine at the entrance to Singapore Harbor. All aboard were rescued by a British patrol boat. Nine crew members were injured.

The Greek steamer Diamantis, 4990 tons, was reported to have been sunk Tuesday by a German submarine off the coast of Ireland. The crew of 28 was landed by the submarine at Dingle, County Kerry, Ireland.

Report Bremen Crew Home, Ship In Neutral Port

BERLIN, Oct. 5 (AP)—The newspaper Frankfurter Zeitung reported today that the crew of the German liner Bremen—more than 900 men—returned to Bremerhaven last Friday after docking the ship in a neutral port.

The newspaper did not identify the neutral port, but said the Bremen's company along with the crew of the steamship Iller reached Bremerhaven on the steamship Sierra Cordoba. The Iller and Sierra Cordoba are both German vessels.

The homecoming seamen were given a cheering reception and the Bremen's captain, Adolf Aherns, was promoted to a commodore by order of Adolf Hitler.

Frankfurter Zeitung said the Bremen reached the neutral port safely. The newspaper added that numerous German ships on the high seas at the outbreak of the war tried either to reach their home ports or neutral harbors.

(The latest report on the whereabouts of the 51,731-ton Bremen, $20,000,000 flagship of the German merchant fleet, was that carried to Olso Tuesday by a sailor who said he saw her in Murmansk, Russian Arctic port, ailong with the 22,337-ton New York, three smaller German liners and 15 German freighters.

(The sailor said 800 members of in Bremen's crew and 400 of the New York's had gone to Germany by way of Russia.

(The Bremen sailed from New York Aug. 30, only 36 hours before war started in Poland and four days before Britain declared war on Germany. The New York sailed from New York Aug. 28).

BACK BAY BRIDE KILLED IN CRASH

A young Back Bay bride of two months was killed and four other persons injured in an automobile crash on the fog-bound Worcester Turnpike in Natick today when the car in which they were riding was in collision with a parked trailer-truck.

Mrs. Cecelia E. Bristol, 28, of Westland av., Back Bay, died almost instantly of a broken neck, doctors said. Her sister, Mrs. Ella Graf, 31, of Broad st., Hudson, was taken to Leonard Morse hospital in Natick, suffering slight injuries, and was later released.

Others injured were Mrs. Bristol's other sister, Mrs. Thomas Myrick, 26, also of Broad st., Hudson, her husband, Don. D. Bristol, 40, and Herman V. Erickson 35, of Abbott st., Worcester.

The dead woman's husband and Erickson were held at the hospital for treatment, but their injuries were not considered serious.

Police said a heavy trailer-truck had been parked at the brow of a hill near the Framingham-Natick line by its driver, William B. Smith of Morrison st., Medford.

The bride, formerly Cecelia E. Miller of St. Botolph st., Back Bay, was a native of Northboro

She was married to Bristol on Aug. 4 in Boston, nearly four years after Bristol had been divorced from Beatrice Bristol in Middlesex court.

Accused of sending a shipment of tainted meat to Central Falls, R. I., Alfred L. Madfis, of Abbott st., Dorchester, was arraigned today before U. S. Judge Francis J. W. Ford, charged with a violation of the pure foods act. He pleaded guilty, and paid a fine of $25.

Wife-Killing Pastor Waits Life Sentence

FLINT, Mich., Oct. 5 (AP) — Convicted of first degree murder in the shooting of his ailing wife, the Rev. James W. Lane, 61-year-old mission preacher and factory worker, will be sentenced tomorrow to a mandatory life term in prison.

A circuit court jury of seven men and five women returned a guilty verdict last night following a trial during which the preacher admitted intimacies with his 41-year o'd housekeeper, Mrs. Helen Sherwood.

Lary Reweds First Wife

MIAMI, Fla., Oct. 5 (AP)—Lyn Lary, major league shortstop, who finished the 1939 baseball season with the St. Louis Cardinals, was remarried in a quiet ceremony here to Mrs. Mary Lawlor Lary, former Broadway singer, from whom he was divorced here last Jan. 29.

"It was sort of a retake," Lary said, "and we'd rather not go into much detail about it."

"We're very happy," said Mrs. Lary.

At the time of the divorce Mrs. Lary's father, Frank J. Lawlor, said it was caused by "a clash of professional temperaments." The hearing was private and attorneys said they parted the best of friends.

They were first married in New York in 1932 and have a son Lynford Lary, Jr., 5.

GIRL'S FLIGHT NOT VAIN, SAVES LIFE

WORCESTER, Oct. 5—Two sheeted figures, mother and daughter, lay on adjoining operating tables. Doctors and nurses stood between them, adjusting valves, reading meters as life-giving blood flowed from the girl's veins into those of the older woman, who needed that blood so desperately . . . In an anteroom police waited to take the girl back to a State school.

Such was the scene, as dramatic as any movie, which worked itself out here at City Hospital early today as the girl, 14, submitted to a blood transfusion designed ti save the life of Mrs. Mary Knaab, 46.

After it was over, physicians nodded and said that now there is hope. . . .

The girl, her identity partly shielded by hospital authorities, is an inmate of the Lancaster State School for Girls.

She heard that her mother was desperately ill—such news sometimes penetrates detention walls.

Frantic, she determined to do something about it. With a girl companion, she escaped, and hiked 18 milse into Worcester. Learning that a transfusion was needed, the girl volunteered immediately.

Although cut and bruised by barbed wire during the hike, and very tired, she was accepted.

Later she was taken back to the school, possibly facing punishment. But she doesn't care. She has, in some measure, made up for the worries she caused her family. She is content.

OPPOSE SEN. TOBEY'S PLAN ON ARMS BILL

Senate May Speed Vote on Neutrality

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5 (AP)—Administration Senators lined up today against a proposal by Senator Tobey, (R.) of New Hampshire, to split the neutrality bill and delay the arms embargo fight until restrictions on American shipping could be enacted.

Majority Leader Barkley (D.) of Kentucky, and Senator Pittman (D.) of Nevada, predicted that Tobey's motion would be defeated when it is argued on Monday.

The tall, scholarly New Hampshire senator advanced his suggestion late yesterday after Senators Connally (D.) of Texas and Vandenberg (R.) of Michigan had spoken for and against the administration measure, which would repeal the arms embargo and substitute a "title and carry" system of sales to warring nations.

Tobey still held the floor today at the resumption of the Senate session (noon, E. S. T.). Assigned to follow him were Senators Overton (D.) of Louisiana, and Nye (R.) of North Dakota, embargo advocates, and Schwellenbach (D.) of Washington, who favors repeal.

FEARS SINKINGS

Tobey argued that the "title and carry" provisions should be enacted immediately to avoid American ships being sunk, as they were before United States entry into the World War.

"Should the Senate refuse to adopt this motion," he said yesterday "and during the next few weeks of debate on the arms embargo repeal clause there should be a repetition of our experiences in the war zones of 1917, I say that those members of this body who refused to put first things first will have a serious and tremendous responsibility."

Pittman said it was "perfectly absurd" to divide the bill and declared that even many opponents of repealing the embargo would not go along with Tobey on the proposal.

EARLY VOTE SEEN

Barkley, who left last night for Kentucky for the funeral of his colleague, Senattor Logan, looked for a final vote on the bill in the third week of debate.

"I think debate is going our way, strengthening the case of the legislation repealing the neutrality act arms embargo," Barkley said. "And I think we'll be getting to some votes on amendments by the middle of next week. Final debate and the final vote will come, I believe, in the third week."

Voting on amendments may be reached the middle of next week, he said.

As radio speeches continued to augment the Senate floor debate, Senators on both sides of the embargo controversy criticized the resolution offered yesterday by Senator Johnson (D.) of Colorado, asking the President to take the initiative in urging other neutrals to work for an armistice in the European war.

Senator Clark (D.) of Missouri, said that some might regard the proposal as pro-German "since Hitler is on top and he would want an armistice now."

International News Photograph Service

ARMISTICE PLAN ATTRACTS SUPPORT

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5 (INS)—The proposal of Senator Ed Johnson (D) of Colorado, for a Senate vote calling on President Roosevelt to seek an armistice in the European war attracted support today.

Johnson's resolution, terming the time "auspicious" and asking the President to seek, with other neutrals, a means of bringing the war to an end, was referred to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

But the committee chairman, Senator Pittman (D.) of Nevada, does not plan to hold a meeting of the committee again during the special session of Congress.

British Wait Hitler 'Last Peace Bid'

By CHARLES A. SMITH
International News Service Staff Correspondent

LONDON, Oct. 5—The chances of peaceful termination of the European war were weighed in the balance today as Great Britain and the world awaited Hitler's address to the Reichstag tomorrow — a speech which may prove the final salvo in the Reich's peace offensive.

The Chamberlain-Halifax point of view was considered at a secret meeting of the conservative "committee of 1922"—one of the most influential groups of Commons.

At the same time the parliamentary Labor party called a secret meeting for today for further consideration of the situation.

TEST FOR PEACE OFFER

Conservative leaders were reported to have agreed that the following vital factors must be considered in any peace proposals that Hitler may advance:

Conditions under which the proposals are offered.
By whom they are offered.
The security which might be attached to any agreement.

Meanwhile the Midland group in Commons voted "unqualified support to the government's policy."

British quarters believe the major German attack on the west will be held back pending the "peace" moves and that the assault, if and when it comes, will either be around one end of the Maginot line or from the air.

WINTER TO SAVE SWISS

The advent of winter will seal the Swiss front before November, leaving Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg—neutral countries—as the area through which the British expect Germany may strike.

In London it is believed neither the French nor Germans will attempt to assault the Siegfried or Maginot lines because of the tremendous losses such attempts would entail.

It is believed the main German autumn drive likely will come from the air.

See Hitler 'Blast-Britain Plan'

INVADE HOLLAND TO RAZE LONDON?

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER
International News Service Staff Correspondent

SOMEWHERE ON THE WESTERN FRONT IN GERMAN TERRITORY, Oct. 5 (INS)—Unofficial opinion among French officers in the Maginot line is unanimous that Hitler means to occupy Holland shortly and launch his attack.

Although the Dutch are determined to resist, it is estimated they cannot possibly hold out more than a few days if Hitler treats them with the concentrated brutality he applied to Poland.

His object will be first to establish air bases for an attack upon England. Thereby German planes would save a total of 300 miles and be placed within 30 minutes flying time of the vast area of London, the largest conglomerate human habitation of offices, docks and factories on the face of the earth.

BLAST AGAINST BRITAIN

1—The German air force establishes bases in Holland, but Hitler reassures Belgium.

2—They bomb England with all the force at their command, aiming especially at docks, airports and airplane factories.

3—Simultaneously, Russia threatens India through Afghanistan, upon whose frontiers 300,000 men of the Red army are already reported massed.

4—Meanwhile, Hitler constantly reassures France he does not intend to attack her, hoping still against hope to separate the allies.

THEN ATTACK ON FRANCE

5—When, however, France rejects, as she will reject such an effort, Hitler then atacks the western front with all the troops he can sparef rom Poland and elsewhere.

This attack, it is believed, will be the famous favorite of modern German strategy—the "double envelopment" — meaning that the Germans will try to thrust through both Belgium and Skitzerland.

Support of this theory was found in repeated reports of German troops concentrations at Aachen and in the Black forest, jumping-off places respectively for Belgium and Switzerland. Officially, however, French military authorities do not admit that sufficient information is yet at hand to justify drawing a positive conclusion that this is indeed Hitler's plan.

CAN VIOLATE NEUTRALITY

It is pointed out that Germany's network of automobile roads and its mechanized and motorized divisions make it possible for Hitler to delay concentration until the last moment.

Then if he wanted, say, to attack Holland he need not begin to send troops to the Dutch frontier from the center of Germany until 48 hours before.

Opposed to the above time-table is the other school which believes Hitler will not break his head against the Maginot line nor against its extensions opposite Belgium and Skitzerland but will sit tight until the allies feel inclined to risk battering the Siegfried line.

For this tactic he has got the advantage of knowing he can and will violate Dutch, Belgian or Swiss neutrality any time he feels like it but that the allies will not, so that he can sit behind the Siegfried line as secure as though it extended all the way along the Dutch, Belgian and Swiss frontier.

Russia Speeds Grab Plan in Turkish Talk

MOSCOW, Oct. 5 (INS)—Diplomatic maneuvers, carried out behind a veil of secrecy but aimed at wide expansion of Soviet Russian influence, went forward today as Premier-Foreign Commissar V. M. Molotov concentrated his attention upon the corps of visiting foreign diplomats.

According to reliable reports, Soviet negotiations with Turkish Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu are progressing toward conclusion of a Russo-Turkish Black sea pact.

(Editor's Note—Reports from Istanbul and Ankara said Saracoglu would remain in Moscow to conclude a Black sea pact and added Soviet-Turkish talks are continuing in a "most friendly atmosphere." New instructions will soon be sent to Saracoglu by the Turkish government, it was stated, and he will remain in Moscow several more days.)

Secrecy still veiled the Soviet's aims with regard to the Balkans and no official comment could be obtained on foreign reports that the Soviet is attempting to gain domination of that area by means of the projected pact with Turkey.

(Reports in London indicated Russia has demanded that Turkey close the strategic Dardanelles to the British and French fleets or other actual or potential enemies of Russia and also that Turkey abandon her military agreements with Britain and France.)

Following ratification at Tallinn of the Soviet-Estonian pact, permitting Moscow to station 25,000 troops in Estonia, Lithuanian Foreign Minister Juozas Urbsys was scheduled to return to Moscow today after a brief conference with the Lithuanian cabinet at Kaunas.

Russ Air Army Mass To Move on Finland

PARIS, Oct. 5 (INS)—Reports received in French government circles today stated that Soviet Russia has massed 600 airplanes and 8000 air corps men at Kronstadt southwest of Leningrad on the Gulf of Finland to exert pressure on Finland.

The Russians are demanding peaceful occupation of certain Finnish cities on the gulf.

Chinese Victors In Changsha

HONGKONG, Oct. 5 (AP)—The Japanese army's first major offensive in nearly a year appeared today to have resulted in a definite Japanese setback with heavy losses.

Chinese reports declared, without Japanese denials, that the columns which had been driving on Changsha, capital of Hunan province, had been thrown back and were withdrawing across the Mi river, 40 miles north of the city.

Swiss Spy Hunters Hold Italian Leader

The charge against Meriani, whose occupation was given as show window decorator, was not disclosed.

Guard League Palace of Peace Against War

GENEVA, Oct. 5 (AP)—The League of Nations' white "palace of peace," which stands out like a target even on the darkest night, is ready for any possible air attack.

Permanent officials of the League have been told what to do in an air raid. Sandbags have been piled along the long passageways under the palace and dark blue curtains already are hanging at its exits.

Now it is possible the league assembly will meet in the shadow of war. After a postponement due to the conflict, informed sources said last night, a meeting will be called in December to consider creation of a central committee for co-ordinating league social and economic activities.

Pope to Sound New Peace Plea

VATICAN CITY, Oct. 5 (AP)—Vatican prelates said today they expected Pope Pius would issue the first encyclical of his reign on Oct. 29, the festival of Christ the King, and that it would contain an appeal for peace.

It was said the Pontiff had been working on such a document since he went to Castel Gandolfo on July 24. Originally, prelates said, it was drafted for delivery in August, but this was postponed because of international developments. Some passages were understood to have been revised to meet the new situation created by the war.

Report Japs Quit Anti-Red Pact

LONDON, Oct. 5 (INS) — The Rome radio station broadcast an assertedly official Japanese news agency declaring Japan has withdrawn from the anti-Comintern pact.

Reason for Japan's action was said to be "the changed situation in Europe."

Signatories to the pact were Germany, Italy, Spain, Japan and Hungary.

Sights Submarine Off Pacific Coast

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 5 (INS)—Capt. W. F. Gayle, master of the Calmar Lines freighter Texmar, declared today he and his crew sighted an unidentified submarine last Monday off the Mexican coast, 360 miles south of Los Angeles.

The undersea craft was moving southward without lights in a regular steamer lane, Capt. Gayle said.

Nazi U-Boat Lands 28; Then Flees Irish

LONDON, Oct. 5 (AP)—The British Press Association said today that a German submarine which landed 28 men from the torpedoed Greek steamer Diamantis on the Irish coast acted too quickly for guards of neutral Ireland to attempt internment of the U-boat.

The ship's crew was set ashore near Dingle, County Kerry, some 15 miles from the spot where Sir Roger Casement, Irish Nationalist, was landed by a German submarine in a World War anti-British plot.

SUB MOVES AWAY

First reports from Dublin said the submarine exchanged greetings with persons ashore while the Diamantis' survivors were ferried to land in a collapsible boat. The Diamantis, 4990 tons, was sunk off Land's End on Tuesday.

"Civic guards patrolling the coast saw the submarine on the surface and rushed to the spot," said the press association's account, "but they were too late to detain the German U-boat. While they were still some distance away the submarine moved away from the coast and started to submerge.

"When the guards actually reached the scene of the landing the only evidence of the daring maneuver of the German U-boat commander was a stretch of frothy sea where the submarine had disappeared and a group of bewildered seamen were on the shore."

Six of the survivors were taken to Dingle hospital for treatment of injuries sustained in the torpedoing. Others said they had been aboard the U-boat for 36 hours and were treated courteously while it cruised off the Irish coast seeking a spot to put them ashore.

Informed sources pointed out that the obligation of a neutral state to intern a submarine in such a case existed only if sufficient force to carry out the internment were available—such as a warship.

CARDINAL DEPLORES HATREDS

A hope that the world will one day learn the secrets of humility and charity, and turn from the cruelty that war and hatred inflict on mankind, was expressed today by Cardinal O'Connell as he spoke after mass at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross.

The occasion was the centennial celebration by the Little Sisters of the Poor, founded in Normandy in 1839, that is being marked throughout the world this month.

"This is a happy day," the Cardinal said, speaking strongly. "We should thank God for the charity in the works of these simple kind-hearted Sisters who dedicate their lives to the poor.

"Today we see a pagan world in which cruelty, born of greed and pride, have brought race to hating race, nation to hating nation, and people to hating people. Oh, is that why God created us?"

He spoke of the millions of dollars squandered yearly in beauty shops and on other "frivolities," money that might better be spent to relieving "bitter" poverty.

Mass was said by the Rt. Rev. M. J. Splaine. Rev. L. B. Cooney was deacon; the Rev. Michael F. Costello, sub deacon, and the Rev. R. P. Barry, preacher. Msgr. Jeremiah F. Minihan was with Cardinal O'Connell.

Record Vote Due in Hub

Extraordinary interest in the impending election of a whole new City Council on Nov. 7 promised today to bring about an all-time high in registration of voters.

With 335,353 voters already qualified, and with registrations continuing until Oct. 18, it appeared certain that the previous city election registration, 344,023 would be passed. At that time Mayor Tobin was elected. City registration for the state election last year was 363,940, a record.

From now on registrations will be accepted nights in every ward, and at City Hall, from 9 a. m. to 10 p. m.

Lending Company Probe Widened

The state investigation of lending companies is being widened to include garages doing repair work on a time-payment basis, Asst. Atty.-Gen. Maurice M. Goldman announced today.

Goldman said he had received complaints that in some cases interest charges of more than 1000 per cent were being made for garage repair work.

GAS PROBE SESSION HOPE 'DIM'

Gov. Saltonstall today studied a petition of 30 members of the House of Representatives for a special legislative session to study gas rate increases, but with scant likelihood of granting the lawmakers' request.

Although promising to consider the matter carefully, the governor recalled to newspapermen his earlier statement that no special session would be called except in the greatest of emergencies.

His latest declaration was taken to mean he did not consider the gas rate increase discussion of sufficient importance to warrant immediate action.

The House delegation filed with the clerk of the House a bill identical with that of Mayor Tobin which was killed by the last legislature. It provided for an investigation to determine the cost of gas purchased by the Boston Consolidated Gas Co.

The bill also provided that the company should not purchase any gas until the department had found after a public hearing that the price to be paid was less than it would cost the Boston Consolidated to manufacture the product.

The group of legislators, headed by Rep. Thomas J. Hannon, Jr., of Dorchester, in a statement said that the city of Boston can take to the Supreme Court questions only of law and not of fact in connection with the gas rate increases.

"Therefore, the only solution left is a special session of the Legislature, and we demand that," they declared.

"It is positively unfair to put an extra burden on the poor people of the metropolitan district of Boston."

Kidnap Man, Threaten to Blow Up Bank

PICHER, Okla., Oct. 5 (AP)—Three desperadoes revived Oklahoma's rip-roarin' bank banditry days with a sensational threat to blow up a Picher bank with nitroglycerine, after kidnaping a salesman and holding him captive more than 40 hours.

The $1195 holdup of the First State Bank here and another at Webbers Falls were the first in 19 months in Oklahoma—once the scene of almost daily raids by such dare-devils as Pretty Boy Floyd.

Yesterday their leader, a 25-year-old blond youth, robbed the Picher bank while Quirk was held hostage 17 miles away.

The bandit demanded $5000 from cashier W. A. Brewer "or I'll blow this place sky-high."

Brewer shoved out a stack of bills, meantime pushing $4000 in currency into a wastebasket. The robber grabbed the money and fled.

12 Nurse Wounds After Stairs Crash

Twelve persons today nursed wounds received when a temporary wooden stairway leading to the platform of the Lynn Municipal Stadium collapsed last night at the celebration of the 50th anniversary of General Electric meter manufacturing in Lynn.

Treated at the scene were Mr. and Mrs. Walter Morgeson of Shawsheen rd., Billerica; Mrs. William Jenkins of Chelmsford Centre; Mrs. Charles Crumble of Lowell; Mrs. Guy Hazeltine of Chelmsford and Mrs. Marjorie Burns of Shirley st., Winthrop and six others.

FORESTERS PLAN SOCIALS

The first of a series of 60th anniversary socials of the Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters will be held tomorrow evening in St. Rose hall, 17 Worcester st., under the direction of Maj. William H. Harrison, Jr., high vice chief ranger.

Trooper Is Indicted In Child Slaying

MAUCH CHUNK, Pa., Oct. 5 (INS)—State Police Corporal Benjamin Franklin today was indicted on three counts of murder, voluntary and involuntary manslaughter for the fatal shooting last June 5 of little Joan Stevens, the Nesquehoning school girl who talked of gangsters and holdups but took dolls to bed with her.

Suspended since the killing and at liberty under $5000 bail on homicide charges, the 33-year-old trooper was named in true bills handed down this morning by the Carbon County grand jury to judge William Thomas.

Date of Franklin's trial was not set although it was reported he would be brought before a jury sometime next week.

Action of the grand jury brought a climax to increasing suspense in this Pennsylvania anthracite area over the shooting of the frail 14-year-old daughter of a coal mine brakeman as she sat with Franklin and Private Edward Swatji in a state police prowl car.

Franklin told authorities after the shooting that he was forced to send eight bullets into the girl's body when she threatened to "blow his brains out" with a weapon later found to be a toy.

The two police officers had picked up the girl for questioning, Franklin said, after she telephoned the State Police office in the Mauch Chunk district and volunteered to give information on plans for a bank robbery she said she had overheard.

INSTALL VOTING MACHINES

Six voting machines were installed today at the Pierce School in Brookline for the town meeting to be held next Tuesday. The machines were authorized by the board of selectmen.

WHEN FLAMES broke out in a Sutherland rd., Brighton, apartment building today, among the 60 forced to flee were Natalie Murphy, 16, and little 17-months-old Martie Paul, whom Natalie snatched from her crib. Police are checking possibility that the blaze was the work of vandals.

San Francisco Fair May Resume in 1940

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 5 (AP)—A group of business men incorporated as the "1940 Exposition, Inc.," launched a campaign today for enough money to reopen the World's Fair next season.

The campaign was given impetus when President Leland W. Cutler of the Exposition announced the fair would close Oct. 29, instead of Dec. 2, to avoid rainy weather and dwindling crowds.

'NEWPORT BATTLE' IN R. I. HIGH COURT

PROVIDENCE, Oct. 5—Newport's battle of a century—the liquor license fight between Society Matron Angela Kaufman and Newport city fathers—went into the final round today before Rhode Island's Supreme Court.

For months the fighting widow has belabored city authorities through the newspapers—piling up a big lead with press releases, but still never getting the license she seeks for her showplace estate, "The Castle."

Chief of her weapons has been "Father" Divine, Negro cult leader of Harlem, who has been extended almost weekly invitations to come to "The Castle" and bring his dusky followers to their new "Heaven."

But "Father" Divine still has not invaded Newport and Mrs. Kaufman still is without her license.

With Atty. William Williams Mrs. Kaufman today made her final rally for victory through an appeal to the high court from the refusal of the Newport licensing board to grant the license.

The city of Newport was represented by City Solicitor Jeremiah A. Sullivan, while residents of Newport—who object to liquor being sold in the area about "The Castle" were represented by W Ward Harvey and William A. Peckham.

Turns Sleuth, Gets His Man

Working for the last eighteen months as a "lone wolf" detective, Dr. Tennyson W. Mackinnon, Framingham dentist, has been searching for the man who allegedly defrauded him of $1500.

The search was over today—he got "his man."

Dr. Mackinnon did not report the alleged fraud to police. Instead, every Wednesday night he has visited the Boston theatrical district in the hope of finding the culprit. Last night, accompanied by a friend, Dr. Mackinnon found the man entering a motion picture theater.

At police headquarters the prisoner, identified as a New York confidence man, was booked on a charge of larceny and false representation.

Patient Fires Shot at Doctor, Ends Own Life

BALTIMORE, Oct. 5 (INS)—Eugene F Murray, 38, of Brooklyn, a patient in Union Memorial Hospital, suddenly whipped a pistol from under his pillow today, fired one wild shot in the direction of a physician and an orderly, and then turned the gun on himself.

Murray died instantly. Neither the physician nor orderly were wounded.

Woman, 4 Men Saved, Say Halliburton Lost at Sea

SEATTLE, Oct. 5 (AP)—Richard Halliburton?

"Oh, he's lost now."

With those four words the skipper of a tiny Chinese junk announced the fate of the adventurous author who sailed into a typhoon in mid-Pacific March 24 and has not been heard of since.

The skipper, Capt. John Anderson, retired Yangtse river pilot, sailed in the Taiping from Shanghai 106 days ago. He accompanied Halliburton's junk until they ran into the typhoon.

Halliburton's death had been accepted generally several weeks ago.

Capt. Anderson, his 25-year-old wife and four men, battered and tossed for weeks in their 50-foot boat, were sighted off Northern Vancouver Island by the coast survey ship Discoverer.

"Almost hysterical, they were waving white rags on long bamboo poles and shouting 'We're lost,'" said Lieut.-Comdr. C. C. Jones of the Discoverer.

The Taiping had been out of touch with the world since July 14, when it received food from the liner President Coolidge 600 miles east of Yokohama.

"They didn't know a war was on in Europe," Comdr. Jones said. "When we told them someone shouted 'Why, we've got a German aboard and he's at the helm.'"

Carnival Man Held In Woman Slaying

Jerry Caiani, 41, itinerant carnival worker, was being held without bail for the grand jury today on a murder charge, following court testimony that a woman cursed at him shortly before she was found dead in his basement room in Dartmouth st., South End, Sept. 15.

Mrs. Edna Kenworthy, 45, testified in Municipal Court that while visiting her son in the rooming house she heard Mary McMullen, 59, of Waltham st., South End, warning Caiani to "leave her alone."

Asked by Atty. William R. Scharton, counsel for the defendant, if she heard anything, Mrs. Kenworthy replied:

"Yes, I heard them stop at a landing and then I heard her curse him, warning him to leave her alone."

The mysterious "Tom," to whom Caiani claims he loaned his room, came up again in testimony.

Mrs. Alice Mosey, South End cafe owner, and Geraldine Sarro, a waitress of Concord sq., both testified they saw Caiani, the McMullen woman and "Tom" sitting in a booth in the cafe shortly before Mrs. McMullen's death.

The waitress testified they all had a drink together, after which Caiani and the woman left together. "Tom," she said, left later, alone, although he had come in with the woman.

FEAR COMET 'SIDETRACKED'

By Associated Press

By switching a celestial freight train to a spur track a heavenly brakeman may spoil one of the century's most spectacular fireworks shows next week, a Harvard astronomer said today.

For some time, explained Dr. Fletcher Watson, astronomers have been "hoping" that the night of October 9 or 10 would bring an unusual display of meteors, or "shooting stars," visible as the earth crossed the path of the faint comet "Giacobini-Zinner."

Explaining that the comet has tiny particles fore and aft "like a freight train with the engine in the middle," Watson said it is the transformation of these particles into bases that produce the phenomenon visible to earth-watchers as "shooting stars."

But the comet has not appeared in favorable position as yet, leading scientists to believe the planet Jupiter may have exerted enough "pull" to switch the comet from a path which would make it more or less chummy with the earth.

About six years ago, Watson said, the strongest meteor shower of the century was observed in Europe when the earth passed through the orbit occupied by the comet 80 days previously.

The astronomer said that if the shower did materialize, "serious amateur observers," and even the general public, could aid science by reporting their observations in different parts of the world.

Cupid Saves Him From Jail

John J. Grebauskl, 25, of Brookville, charged with interstate transportation of a stolen automobile, for which he already has served six months after a state trial, thanked his stars today that he is about to be married.

When he announced in Federal Court that he was about to be wed, Federal Judge Francis J. W. Ford gave Grebauskl a break, suspending sentence and placed him on probation for three years.

Judge Ford exacted Grebauskl's promise to keep out of trouble in the future.

Woman Killed By Elevator

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 5 (AP)—Mrs. Joseph L. Phillips, Philadelphia social registerite, was killed here in an elevator of the John Wanamaker department store.

Store detectives said the 53-year-old woman, the former Louisa B. Hodges, was entering a descending elevator at the third floor when she was decapitated.

Her 19-year-old daughter, Harriet, and a dozen other shoppers witnessed the accident.

Mrs. Phillips' husband is an official of the Philadelphia Storage Battery Co.

DELIA BOGARD, LEFT, AND MARY WAGNER
To Testify in Dancer's Murder

YOUTH STANDS TRIAL IN DANCER'S MURDER

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 5 (AP)—After pleading guilty a month ago to charges of murdering Anya Sosoyeva, blonde former Follies dancer, 20-year-old De Witt Clinton Cook switched his plea to innocent and then listened stolidly to selection of a jury to try him.

He pleaded guilty, however, to four counts of assault in connection with attacks on two other young women and two counts of burglary.

Over the protest of Deputy Dist.-Atty. U. U. Blalock, sentencing of the latter charges was postponed until next Monday.

He argued that sentence, a possible maximum of life imprisonment, should be pronounced before Cook was brought to trial on the murder charge.

In court and ready to testify against the youthful defendant were Della Bogard, 17-year-old film dancer, and Myrtle Wagner, 17, a domestic, both of whom were brutally clubbed.

Cook's earlier plea of guilty to the bludgeon death of Miss Sosoyeva on the Los Angeles City College campus last February 24 was set aside shortly afterward by Superior Judge Clarence L. Kincaid on his own motion.

Anya Sosoyeva

The deputy district-attorney indicated the State will demand the death sentence for Cook.

He indicated the prosecution would rely mainly on the reading of Cook's statement to police and sound movies showing his reenactment of the killing, together with testimony of Capt. Dalton R. Patton of the Police Homicide Bureau and other officers.

AFL TO ACT AGAINST LEAGUE

CINCINNATI, O., Oct. 5 (AP)—The American Federation of Labor, meeting in its 59th annual convention here today, started action to weaken John L. Lewis' Non-Partisan League by closing the doors of AFL state and city labor bodies to trade unionists who belong to the league.

A request for such action was made by the representative of the California State Federation of Labor.

The federation broke with the league in 1937 over the CIO issue, contending that the league was an arm of the rival labor movement led by John L. Lewis.

Through Pres. William Green, the AFL served notice in 1938 on all directly affiliated state federations and city central bodies to divorce their organizations from the league.

A resolution submitted by the California Federation asked the A. F. of L. convention to reaffirm its stand against the league and to instruct Green to order all directly affiliated bodies to refuse membership to individual A. F. of L. members as well as organizations who have remained in the league.

The convention yesterday voted to retain for another year the so called "war chest" special assessment levied in the spring of 1937 when the A. F. of L. chiefs began mapping a broad scale counter-offensive against the CIO in the organizing field.

The delegates voted down an effort to side-track temporarily the question of carrying on the levy until the convention obtained a report on a resolution to raise the regular per capita tax on international unions from one to two cents per member per month.

YOUNGEST HANN'S WEIGHT GOES UP ON 'IRON RATION'

Boston Evening American Photo

DORCHESTER HANN FAMILY STICKS TO NAZI DIET
Nutriment, But Not Much Variety, Their Lot

By GEORGE W. CLARKE

Theron Hann has upset the apple cart! . . .

He's the youngest and the most active of the Hann family in Dorchester, which, for a week ending Saturday, is living on the German iron ration, the same food which they would be allowed to have if they were in war-stricken Nazi-land and not in the peace and security of our own beautiful country.

And it's a rigorous, rough diet, with practically no meat, no butter, only a little fat and sparse portions of sugar, but—

Theron has gone and put on a half a pound.

Maybe it's the scales. Maybe it's just that he likes boiled potatos, turnips, carrots and skimmed milk. Maybe it's just that the time has come, as it does in the normal development of all little boys, when he was supposed to put on a half a pound.

Whatever the reason, there it is.

ONE EGG PER WEEK

And Theron is the youngster who thought that he couldn't get along without his two or even three eggs a day.

At one egg per person per week he hasn't even had a snitch of an egg—since last Saturday morning, and he's thriving.

All of which is not unexpected in that Dr. Charles H. Kelley, of No. 36 Hancock st., an instructor at Tufts Medical School, supervising the test, explains that there is nothing fundamentally wrong with the diet, insofar as nourishment is concerned, but that it is, of course, most uncomfortable.

The only apparent vitamin in deficiency is of Vitamin A, a not very necessary vitamin, anyway. But the diet, which is an abundant one—more than the Hann family can really eat—has plenty of heat units and necessary nutritive elements.

ONION FOR FLAVOR

Leslie Hann, the father of the family, is managing to get along all right, too, although he has to take two unbuttered sandwiches to work each day at the office of the election board, where he has a part time job.

He realizes that he and his family are helping to show just how difficult war really can be.

Mrs. Jeanette Hann, the little wife and mother, spends all day in her spotless kitchen in their home at 1153 Dorchester avenue, devising new means of preparing the rations. She had learned that for flavoring, it's pretty hard to beat an onion.

Thelma, 13; Leslie, Jr., 12, and Gladys, 9, are apparently thriving on the diet, too, but all are looking forward to Sunday when the diet will be over, and they are going to break their fast with a banquet.

Until then—well, even a potato can taste good.

How to Treat Next Treaty

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

We are against ending this war with a treaty. That's what started it.

Somebody didn't like the last treaty and somebody is sure not to like the next one. That's a better formula for perpetual motion than pulling weeds in Maine.

We should make 'em fight this out to the last man. Then we should make the last man decide whether he wants to be the army or the navy.

Mistrial for Five In Petzold Case

Judge Paul G. Kirk, in superior court today, declared a mistrial in the cases of five defendants on charges growing out of robberies in which Paul A. Petzold, former Boston policeman, pleaded guilty to taking part.

The mistrial was called after a juror, Harold J. Richardson, clerk of Washington st., Jamaica Plain reported to the court that a stranger had called him last night at Richardson's home and talked with him about the case.

As a result of the incident Detectives Thomas Conaty and William Philbrick took into custody for questioning, a 30-year-old Revere man who was in the courthouse corridor.

AWAKENED BY CALLER

Juror Richardson told the court that he was awakened about 11:30 last night by the caller at his home.

The juror said he admitted a light-haired man, about five feet nine inches tall, with a cast in one eye, but when the stranger asked that Richardson give one of the five defendants "a break" and hold out for a disagreement the juror ushered his visitor out of the house.

Judge Kirk immediately announced that the trial was recessed, and after other jurors were questioned the judge announced a mistrial.

The five defendants in the case are Guy Marcucella of East Boston, and William Gillar, Frank Williams, Albert Abrams and Nicholas Gematzky.

Petzold himself pleaded guilty to charges of armed robbery, breaking and entering and armed robbery, and turned state's evidence.

Bradshaw Sees More Business

Although the war will promote business recovery in the United States there will be no such hysterical boom as marked the World War, members of the 50-50 Club were told at their Parker House luncheon by Hugh Bradshaw, financial editor of the Boston Evening American.

Bradshaw said that common-sense moderation is the only viewpoint that can be adopted and that every important nation of the world is determined to avoid inflation.

"War came when a fairly broad and apparently sound revival was under way," he said. "Those who had been following the rise suddenly speeded up buying tempos. In other words, an overnight change from a poor man's to a well-to-do man's attitude took place.

"Price rises were largely built on this situation. We have lived in depression for many years. Many have forgotten how to act natural during revival.

"Future gains are not out of the question. Latin American trade, home revival of heavy industry and war orders of some kind will continue to promote price rises and production.

"But we insist they will be of the sort any domestic recovery would bring."

HELP KIDNEYS PASS 3 PINTS A DAY

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. Kidneys remove excess acids and poisonous waste from your blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

WOBURN PAYS CITY WORKERS

For the first time since Sept. 11, Woburn city employes had a pay day today.

Checks totaling $38,000 were received and distributed by City Treasurer Michael J. Curran to policemen, firemen and to City Hall, public works department, library employes, school teachers.

All except the school teachers were paid in full. They were paid only two weeks leaving two weeks still due.

Meanwhile the mayor's brother, Fire Chief Michael Kane, was under court order to appear Monday in superior court to show cause why a writ of mandamus should not issue to force his putting Woburn's two-platoon system for firemen into effect.

The order, by Judge Frederick Greenhalge, resulted from a complaint presented to the tribunal, in which they charged that they are virtually prisoners on the job, having to remain on duty 24 hours a day, six days a week.

AFTER 50 YEARS—Mr. and Mrs. Hugh J. Scollins of Fairview st., Roslindale, pose with their son, William Randolph Scollins, one of 12 children, on their 50th wedding anniversary.

Lonely, Calls Cops; Lotsa Company Now

He was all alone by a telephone and the bus terminal in Pat Square looked awfully deserted at 4 a. m.

So a 37-year-old Somerville man, awakened from his slumbers in the washroom, decided to call police and tell them that he was locked inside.

Then it wasn't at all lonely. First a radio car with two officers, then a foot patrolman showed up, followed later by more policemen.

Nobody could find a key or any unlocked opening. Patrolman Samuel Willis thought he had the answer when he climbed four vegetable crates and made a futile try to open the transom. Then the "victim" unsteadily climbed up on an arm of a leather sofa, but fell ingloriously.

After that, there was nothing to do but wait for a company official to come in from Wakefield and open the door. Again came policemen—two this time, in the patrol wagon, to take the victim to Cell No. 3 at Back Bay station, where nobody is ever lonesome.

Wins Divorce Over Bathrobe

A bathrobe is no fit garb for a woman to drive an automobile in even if the machine is in her own yard.

This conviction found support with Judge Joseph W. Monahan in Middlesex Probate Court, where a divorce on grounds of cruelty was granted to Mrs Elizabeth B. Nay of Brookline, an attractive blonde.

Mrs. Nay told the court her husband, Winthrop Nay, Jr., had forced her out in her bathrobe to put the family machine into the garage. She said her husband had struck her and she was afraid not to obey him.

ELSIE ROBINSON writes the woman's viewpoint, discusses everyday affairs and problems, regularly in the Boston American.

'ALIEN' INSURANCE THREAT REVEALED

The American insurance field is being invaded by "alien" companies, according to Walter H. Bennett of New York, general counsel of the National Association of Insurance Agents, who delivered the keynote address to 2000 delegates holding their 44th annual convention at the Hotel Statler.

Bennett also branded untrained insurance salesmen as "barnacles" which slowed up the business, and called for establishment of an "insurance college" for training them.

In his protest against foreign companies Bennett charged that Lloyds of London recently transferred $40,000,000 of capital from the "war zone" in London to New York banks as "a reservoir to be used in insurance transactions."

He said he asked the New York state insurance superintendent whether Lloyds should not be required to be licensed as any other company and pay its proportion of taxes on business transactions. But, he said, he was [illegible] only the intention of Lloyds was solely to subject the fund to the jurisdiction of the New York courts for the interests of American creditors having claims, and there seemed to be nothing legal against this.

Under the association's plan for better trained men an insurance college would be sponsored and financed by the association and the fire, casualty and surety companies as a non-profit undertaking. It would be supplemented by a drive to encourage complete uniform insurance courses in schools, universities and summer schools.

'Twas a Stickup But Not Holdup

"Stick your hands up!" So shouted Special Officer William R. McMullin of the Brookline police as he found a youth in a dark alley at Naples st., Brookline.

In a few minutes the officer and the youth were surrounded by three squads of patrolmen in charge of Detective Sergeant George T. Hughes. The young man, held for questioning, was found to be a student who was taking a short cut through the alley and was released

HOLLYWOOD 'SEES ITSELF'

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 5 (AP)—Several hundred Hollywoodites, who paid $10 a seat for the privilege, saw a movie about themselves which does not poke fun at them. It sets a precedent.

They agreed that if for no reason other than that "Hollywood Cavalcade" was neither critical nor satirical, the admittance fee was not too large. In addition they saw a sincerely-told story, entertaining and as historically correct as dramatic license would permit.

It was Hollywood's second $10 premiere. The first was "The King of Kings" which opened the Chinese theater in 1927. The entire proceeds of this event, $9000, were given to the motion picture relief fund.

This history starts in the early days of one-reelers, innovation and uncertainty, concluding with the dramatic arrival of sound. One of its climaxes is Al Jolson's "Kol Nidre," which he sang in the first talkie, "The Jazz Singer."

Darryl Zanuck, who produced this film, worked for the Warners when they staked their all on sound.

Those who have watched the development of Hollywood ought to be able to recognize in "Cavalcade" the hives and loves which suggested the story.

A prop boy "discovers" an actress, signs her to a contract, forces himself into a directorship, builds himself into a giant of the industry, then loses the girl because he is so busy thinking up fade-outs, Keystone kops, bathing beauties, custard pies and million dollar spectacles.

In the best movie tradition, the boy eventually gets back the girl, but a wet-eyed audience knew that, in real life, this very likely did not happen.

Don Ameche and Alice Faye are the principals. Buster Keaton, a gag writer now, is seen as the guy who started all the pie throwing. He's as funny as ever.

The hilarious highlight is the return of the Keystone kops, whose ridiculous chases seemed funnier than ever.

What this country needs, a lot of people leaving the theater thought, is more Keystone kops.

HITLER SEES RUIN MADE OF WARSAW

tivities would be governed by those of England.

In other words, it will be a case of "tit for tat." Germany will not search food-laden ships for contraband if Britain does not search them. Germany's real intention is to do all in her power to blockade England to the same extent as Britain blockades Germany.

Hitler will return to Berlin tonight.

READY FOR "SMASH"

Informed quarters indicated there is a possibility that Hitler may propose a brief truce in the European war while another diplomatic attempt to restore peace is launched.

Under this plan the anticipated major push against the allies in the west would be held back to give Britain and France time to consider Hitler's terms.

Meanwhile, what the Germans call "quiet" on the western front will remain in force until after Hitler's address tomorrow noon (6 a. m. E. D. T.).

Thereafter, it was believed, British and French official reaction will determine the next steps taken by the Reich.

Should it become clear beyond shadow of doubt in Berlin that the Anglo-French allies—despite anything Hitler may say tomorrow—are still determined to continue the war against Germany, wholesale action is virtually certain to develop in the west.

There also were hints that the Berlin-Moscow accord, in such an event, may develop further into strong Russo-German action.

With flags hoisted throughout the Reich in celebration of the German victory in Poland, German divisions which participated in the Polish campaign are now flowing toward the western front.

German circles indicated the Reich, Soviet and Italian diplomatic machines are ready to cooperate closely in the face of future developments.

REPLY TO CHURCHILL

Commenting on an alleged British admiralty order to merchant vessels to attack German submarines, the diplomatic correspondence, organ of the German foreign office, stated:

"Churchill (Winston Churchill, First Lord of the British Admiralty) knows very well that the material losses of the British navy cannot be diminished by arming merchantmen, since German counter-measures by necessity will be intensified.

"He knows that tactic will only have the effect of increasing the danger to the crews of British vessels.

"This is thus Churchill's unscrupulous intention: By the sacrifice of human lives—from the human point of view—to increase the feeling of hatred to such an extent that the voice of reason which might be in favor of termination of the senseless state of war cannot be raised."

Coast Guard Recruits Yachts

The U. S. Coast Guard today began organization of a Coast Guard Reserve to be made up of yachtsmen and motorboat owners throughout the country who can assume routine duties in time of emergency, leaving the regular Coast Guard fleet to carry on other work.

In charge of reserve recruiting in Boston is Lieut Commander W. C. Thomas, Coast Guard intelligence officer.

Flotillas of 10 boats each are to be formed, grouped in three classes. Seagoing yachts or motorboats with accommodations and capable of extended offshore cruises; motorboats or yachts with accomodations and adapted for use upon protected waters, and motorboats without accomodations.

Youth Program Offers Jobs

A total of 2200 more Massachusetts boys and girls today are eligible for work under the National Youth Administration program, it was revealed by State Administrator John L. Donovan.

From now on, applicants will be accepted from needy families and not be confined to those whose families are receiving welfare or WPA aid. Of the 2200 to be added, more than 1000 will be taken from Greater Boston.

Duce Seen As Hidden Mediator

ROME Oct. 5 (INS)—Strong indications emerged today that Premier Mussolini is prepared to act as a behind-the-scenes mediator on behalf of peace.

Il Duce's activity based on German initiative, will be conditioned by the fact that Italy does not want to participate in the European war and plans to take no military initiative. On the other hand, the Rome government is anxious to restore peace.

(Editor's Note: A London dispatch stated the Rome radio broadcast this announcement "Italian policy is directed towards preventing the second European war from spreading and assuming proportions disastrous to humanity. There is, no reason to assume Italy will engage in military operations unless she does so in her own defense or in defense of her interests.")

According to reliable reports, Italy will support Chancellor Hitler's forthcoming peace proposals, which Rome diplomatic circles say may include a huge British loan to Germany, creation of an autonomous Czech state of Bohemia-Moravia, a new ethnological Polish state and German retention of Danzig, the Polish corridor and some African colonies.

Capt. H. W. Bacon, officer in charge of the district, said candidates must be between the ages of 18 and 30, from 64 to 74 inches in height, native born or fully naturalized citizens, of good moral character and in good health.

The enlistment period is for four years. Young men under 21 must have the consent of parents or legal guardians.

The Boston recruiting station is at Room 736, new Postoffice Building. Other New England recruiting stations are in Worcester and Portland, Me.

High Blood Pressure Yields to Surgery

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 5 (INS)—Surgery has been of marked value in the treatment of high blood pressure, Dr. Max Peet of the University of Michigan, told the conference of the Kansas City Southwest Clinical Conference here.

Dr. Peet said the operation consisted of the cutting of nerves connected with the blood vessels that led to the kidneys. In 194 such operations, he said, there had been complete or almost complete relief from symptoms of the affliction in 76 per cent of the cases, and an improvement in most of the others so treated.

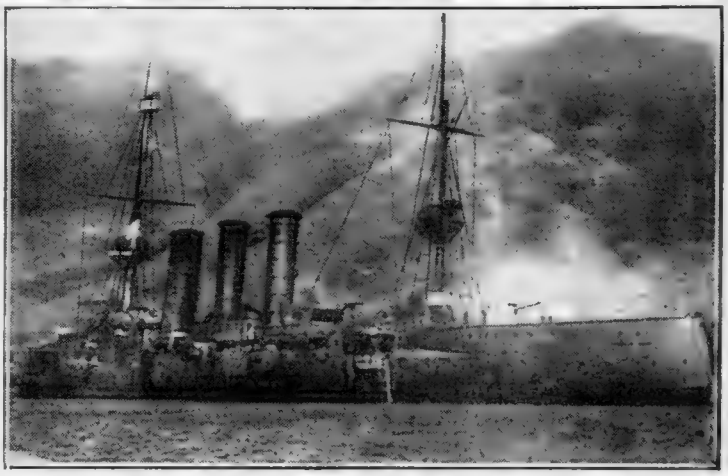
THE SEA RAIDERS

Dramatic Story of War's Lone Wolves of the Sea

By FRED PERKINS

SHEER and precipitous, the frowning volcanic cliffs of Juan Fernandez island rise out of the blue South Pacific.

On the narrow white beach, blazing in the tropic sun against a background of green jungle, long-ago pirate crews—fierce, swarthy men with gold rings in their ears and pistols and cutlasses at their belts—once careened their ships.



Sea Raider Dresden Lying Off Juan Fernandez Island

And their mocking shades, risen from forgotten graves and scarred with ghostly marks of penal lash and torture rack and gibbet, must have welcomed as a vessel of their own freebooter brotherhood the hunted German sea raider Dresden, when she limped into Juan Fernandez harbor, March 9, 1915.

True, it was the white Imperial ensign of Kaiser Wilhelm's navy that the Dresden flew at her forepeak, not the skull and crossbones of the Jolly Roger.

But like the pirate ships of yore, the Dresden was a lawless vulture of the ocean lanes, preying on the sea-borne commerce of the world. And relentlessly trailing her elusive wake were "as grim an array of pursuing men-of-war as ever hunted Kidd or Blackbeard or Teach to eventual surrender and death.

Nearly run at last was the Dresden's course when she dropped her anchor in lonely Cumberland bay, in the shadow of the towering Juan Fernandez hills.

The German sea raider's commander, square-jawed, steel-eyed Captain Ludecke, had just received and decoded a wireless message relayed to him across two oceans.

It was from the Navy High Command at Berlin, and it read:

"His Majesty the Kaiser congratulates you for gallant services rendered and hereby gives you full and free permission to intern your vessel and save yourself and your crew."

"'Permission,' Hah!" Captain Ludecke seized upon that word. "Permission" was not an order.

His nation was at war, he had a ship under his feet, the Imperial ensign still fluttered from the Dresden's mast, there were enemies of Germany to attack.

Intern the Dresden? Not he!

YET, if he was to take his vessel to sea again, if he was to resume his raiding of Allied commerce, his desperate game of hide and seek with French and British navies, he must first face at least two vital and perplexing problems.

Coal must be obtained to fill the Dresden's almost empty bunkers. And the vessel's racked engines, scaled boilers, loosened drive shafts must be overhauled.

Worst of all was the coal. Greedy turbines of a fast cruiser like the Dresden ate up fuel dismayingly. A scant 80 tons were all Captain Ludecke had.

There was no coal on Juan Fernandez island. Owned by Chile, the little dot of rock and jungle 400 miles off Valparaiso had a population of only 300 souls, including the military garrison of four gendarmes and the Chilean governor.

This official, a gentleman advanced in years, gave merely a small part of his time to his executive duties, the rest to his regular job as lighthouse keeper.

Having warned the Dresden that she was trespassing in Chilean waters and grossly violating Chilean neutrality, the governor philosophically turned his attention to his beacon.

To Captain Ludecker, his technical legal status at Jan Fernandez was less than no worry at all. But he had to have coal, and the only way he could get it was to have it brought to him from the mainland.

Germany's clandestine service of supply for her sea raiders had already begun to break down lamentably, but the Dresden's commander had been informed there were laden colliers lurking along the South American coast, ready to come at his call.

He was fully aware of the deadly peril of operating his wireless—but he had no choice! Using a prearanged secret code, he flashed his whereabouts to two such colliers, instructing them to proceed to his anchorage with all possible caution.

The coal ships never kept that rendezvous. It was kept, instead, by three British battle cruisers which had been doggedly hunting the long-evasive Dresden up and down the South Atlantic, in and around the treacherous, ice-clogged Straits of Magellen, back and forth through the smiling emptiness of these South Sea waters.

Dresden Sinking—Sea Raider's End

NOW their prey was run to cover, thanks to patient, persevering toil of a signal officer on the cruiser Glasgow. Night after sleepless night, he had puzzled methodically over the Dresden's wireless message. And at last—at long last—he had broken down the code.

So Juan Fernandez island was where the German sea wolf was holed. Juan Fernandez island, where the pirates had buried their bloody treasure, guzzled their rum, scraped the weed off their ship's bottoms. Where Alexander Selkirk, immortalized as Defoe's "Robinson Crusoe," had lived his years of solitude.

Well, the peace of Juan Fernandez was due to be shattered now. Smoke poured heavy and black from the funnels of the Glascow and her sister cruisers, the Kent and the Orama. Stoke hole crews toiled until they dropped, then crawled back cursing to their tasks again.

"Too long, too audaciously, the Dresden had flouted the Royal British Navy's might.

"Full speed for Juan Fernandez" was the order.

First to steam into Cumberland Bay was the Glasgow, Captain Luce in command. Not far behind was the Kent, delayed by her badly fouled bottom. The Kent, only a few weeks before, had actually sighted the Dresden in open sea and had chased her until engines of pursued and pursuer had almost torn themselves from their beds and white-faced junior officers had held the safety valves down and muttered frayers the straining boilers would hold.

The Kent had been too slow, that other time. And she was slow again at Juan Fernandez island. Not too slow, however. For she was in at the death.

Captain Ludecke of the Dresden had so little coal he couldn't run, could hardly maneuver his vessel. Best he could do was get up steam in one boiler in order to operate the raider's auxiliary gear.

The Dresden had 12 4.1-inch guns to the Glasgow's 10 4-inch ones, but by the time the battle started, the British cruisers Kent and Orama had arrived to take a hand.

It was an unequal fight, with the odds hopelessly against the German raider. While volunteer gunners remained to die at their posts, the rest of the Dresden's officers and men made for shore, some in small boats, the others swimming.

Withering broadsides from the British cruisers set the Dresden afire, killed seven of her seamen and wounded 29 others, 15 of them seriously.

Now the British stopped shelling and closed in to seize their prize. But they were cheated in the end.

The delay the German gun crews had gallantly purchased with their lives had been utilized to lay a time-fuse to the raider's forward magazine. As the last survivors abandoned ship, the whole bow of the Dresden erupted in terrific explosion.

SHE went down almost instantly, nose first, her ensign still flying defiantly. And her officers and men, bedraggled, powder-blackened and weary, many of them wounded and bleeding, stood on the beach, the strong supporting the weak—and sang a requiem for their ship, "Deutchland uber Alles."

With their first landing party, the British sent a surgeon ashore. And his services were badly needed. Yet on the British cruisers, themselves, not a casualty had been sustained.

So the Dresden met her doom But before she was hunted down, she had made naval history. Few marine exploits of the World War were more remarkable than hers.

From Port au Prince, Haiti, where she was stationed when war was declared, she ducked and dodged and circled down the whole length of the South Atlantic, finally rounding the outer tip of "Old Cape Stiff," the frozen, gale-swept Horn, to join German

How Death Bomb Explodes as Destroyer Rains Depth Bombs Over Course of Raiding U-Boat

KEEP U. S. OUT OF WAR
—Be Neutral—

"Let us not fool ourselves. We are NOT prepared for war." —Lieutenant-General Lee Bullard in an exclusive article in the Hearst papers.

NO MAN IN AMERICA is better qualified to tell us of our defense deficiencies than General Bullard.

He knows the Army, he knows war. A West Pointer, General Bullard served in the Apache, Spanish-American, Filipino, Mexican border and World Wars.

He therefore broadcasts his warning to us with an authority and convincingness no civilian can possibly have.

"We are not prepared to fight as war is fought today," says General Bullard. And that, says the General, is the "tersest" reason, among many others, why "we had better stay out of war."

AMERICAN BOMBERS
Too Few in Number

Because of the advances that other nations have made in modern war technique we are, he says, "LESS prepared" for war and by "war," he means, of course, a defensive war against invasion.

This is a grave situation for all America to confront.

And here are the concrete reasons and facts that General Bullard gives for our defenselessness today:

1. We need a Navy that should defend our interests in the Pacific, the Atlantic, in Latin America and that should defend our Merchant Marine and the Panama Canal.

We HAVEN'T GOT SUCH A NAVY.

We are a two-ocean power with only an adequate ONE-OCEAN FLEET.

2. We have only about 250 first-class fighting planes, according to General Bullard.

While 6000 have been authorized, they are not ready in case of a "lightning stroke" at us.

3. We need "flying fortresses" to patrol many "hundreds of miles from our boundaries."

We HAVEN'T GOT the necessary number of "flying fortresses" on either coast.

4. "Most emphatically," says General Bullard, "we do not have military power adequate for defense."

Only about 60,000 trained soldiers "could be moved on M-day to meet an enemy."

With all credit to the National Guard, General Bullard says that "they cannot be well-trained soldiers."

5. "Of actual 'mechanization'—genuinely modernized fighters—we have but a SINGLE BRIGADE."

That is, half as much as Mussolini used in his invasion of Albania.

6. Our Army is old fashioned and largely a foot-soldier Army.

This, remember, is our deplorable condition not for offensive purposes but for HOME DEFENSE.

IT IS TRUE that we are building up sea, air and land forces, but they are not only not sufficiently adequate—even on paper—but they will not suffice in the present condition of the world to preserve our neutrality.

What is most incumbent at the present time is the putting to work of all idle available man-power in the country building aircraft, air-defenses and a two-ocean Navy.

We must immediately mechanize and equip an Army recruited up to FULL PEACE STRENGTH.

We must build a CEILING over us and WALLS OF DEFENSE all around us that will talk to a potential invading nation not with words but with MATERIALIZED POWER.

We must SPEND AND WORK for PEACE, as Europe spends and works for war

Human Side of News -:- By EDWIN C. HILL

IN TIMES of trouble, it never pays to be too conspicuous. With the European war on, prices of big, beautiful diamonds are away down and small, lack-lustre little industrial diamonds are away up. Striking an average for all stones, the price is higher, but the bigger they come the harder they fall, and the farther.

A friend's report of the experience of an English family, meeting the war emergency, tells the story of the more regal gems. This family, like many others of England and France, sent their two children, with a governess, to this country.

Forbidden by the British government to liquidate American securities, they sent to New York, for sale, a ten-karat, emerald-cut diamond, an ancestral stone, which had been appraised at $12,-000. At this writing, the highest offer they have received is $4500.

MANY other English families hurriedly expatriating children or relatives also had put large diamonds on the market in New York. The result has been an over-supply of the better stones.

At a recent auction sale of valuable precious stones by the largest pawn brokerage house in New York there was no bidding whatever for the sparklers.

It is not only the flood of European diamonds which is depressing the market. In spite of the recent market rise, the country is still in a "stop, look, and listen" mood that doesn't induce a plunge of $100,000 in a diamond, and some of them are worth many times that amount in normal times.

The above is restricted to the imposing gems which always move along nicely at top prices in the days of a boom market. Within the last few days there has been a slight advance in such stones as the average young American buys for his bride's wedding ring.

WEARS $150,000 GEM!
Famous Maximilian Diamond

But industrial stones are up from 35 to 40 per cent, and late reports are that they will go much higher. Many war machines, such as the elaborate range-finding and aiming gear of an anti-aircraft gun, are instruments of precision, and diamonds are needed to make them.

The Germans have had the most skilled cutters, but Britain has the best of the small diamonds pretty well sewed up, with about $12,-000,000 worth in reserve, corralled before the war started by the Diamond Syndicate of London.

Every country in the world is hanging onto its industrial diamonds, particularly Holland and Belgium, which are important centers of the diamond industry. The United States, also speeding up its production of war tools, is said to have a supply for about six or eight months.

WAR EXALTS utility, even if the useful thing be an instrument of destruction. It debases the merely symbolic and beautiful, the surplus gains of civilization, all the increments of leisure and the arts. There is macabre irony in the use of diamonds to make war implements.

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt -:- MY DAY

SEATTLE, Wash., Oct. 5—It certainly is fun to visit one's children. I found myself marveling at the strength of my youngest grandchild yesterday. He is the most friendly, happy baby I have seen in a long while.

As he sat in his father's lap at breakfast this morning, I couldn't help noticing how alike the two heads are in shape, though I can't say I have ever been able to see close resemblances in features when a baby is only six months old.

The older children are fascinated by him and when he grows up I suppose it will be hard to keep them from spoiling him.

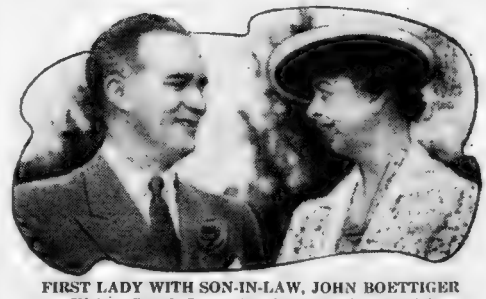
Anna, Sistie and I took a walk yesterday afternoon with the two Irish setters. "Jack" never forgets me and greeted me warmly, but "Jill" is a fickle lady and took very little interest in my arrival, but she has no objection to be petted, which some will say is a woman's trait.

MY TRIP OUT this time was very uneventful, though the rain and fog kept us two hours in Billings, Mont., which gave us a chance to go to a hotel.

I had a bath at 5 a. m. and breakfast at the airport at about 6:30 Mountain Time, which was 5:30 Pacific Time, and this meant I was very pleased when we sat down to lunch here in Seattle.

I don't think one feels really weary until evening, but I have to own that I was practically falling asleep standing up when I finally went to bed at 9:30 p. m.

In a magazine devoted to



FIRST LADY WITH SON-IN-LAW, JOHN BOETTIGER
Visit to Seattle Proves Fascinating and Delightful

the schools of our country I have just read the observations of 31 expert educators and journalists who try dispassionately to answer three questions with which we are all concerned.

1. What are goals of our schools? Are they meeting the tests of American education in the American way?

2. Are our children learning how to think for themselves as citizens of a democracy, or are they likely to fall in line behind a rabble rouser?

3. Can we cut across economic and racial barriers and really provide equal opportunities for education for every young man?

Some of us know, for instance, that approximately 800,000 children in the U. S. A. did not attend school last year because there either was no school owing to the poverty of their neighborhood, or they belonged to a family which was too poor to provide them with clothes and books, etc.

We also know that because of economic conditions in certain parts of our country, the school year has been curtailed, in some cases only a few weeks, but in some cases several months.

It is true that some great men succeeded without schooling, but most of them somewhere along the line came in contact with a great teacher who pointed out the way whereby they might educate themselves. In many places we are giving little thought to the development of great teachers today.

We think more about curtailing their salaries than we do about improving their qualifications. A really good teacher can never be paid, and they do not develop well on starvation wages.

MARGARET SULLAVAN IN FILM COMEBACK

By Louella O. Parsons

Margaret Sullavan

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 5—I like Darryl Zanuck's idea of filming a history of the Salvation Army, bringing in, of course, the story of its founders General and Mrs. William Booth and their daughter, Evangeline. Darryl has bought "Marching As To War" from Lawrence Pohle and Thomas Aherne, which tells a comprehensive story of this vast organization, started shortly after the Civil War

General Booth organized the army to reach people who did not go to church, and he conceived the idea of giving it a military aspect Founded in England its first branch in America was started in 1880 The two writers are now on the 20th Century-Fox lot, preparing their original story for filming in January.

VEREE TEASDALE

MARGARET SULLAVAN has been off the screen far too long to suit this writer and many of her fans, too, who have written to ask about her. She hasn't made a picture since the birth of her baby nearly a year ago. But Metro assures me they are going to remedy this by giving Maggie two pictures as quickly as possible Louis B. Mayer today bought "A Long Time Ago," by Philo Higley and Philip Dunning, a highly dramatic play, which had a Broadway production. It will be made as soon as she finishes 'The Shop Around the Corner,' and Edward Chodorov is renaming it "Remember the Day."

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD: Two dates in a row constitute a twosome in Hollywood So Sonja Henie and Alan Curtis can be classed thus Saw them at the Brown Derby and he made a date with her for "Hollywood Cavalcade", by the same token Betty Stewart is Howard Hughes' big moment. They were dancing two nights ago in succession at the Cocoanut Grove Joan Crawford, all in red, beaued by Harry Mines, newspaper writer, to "Mr. Smith Goes To Wasnington" One of the highlights after the preview was Jimmy Stewart's voice on the loud speaker calling for Loretta Young, whom he had lost in the crowd

DAILY STORY

'I Wear Wings'

GORDON was a pilot in the Air Corps. My husband met him while supervising a construction project at the flying field, and they formed a close friendship

Gordon proved to be a very interesting and agreeable person. Tall, handsome, well educated, gentle and a bit shy in his manner, his reserve, seemed to me to cover a great loneliness. He seemed to find happiness in our company and in our modest home, dropping in at any time he felt the need of companionship.

IN TIME, I learned that he had been the victim of an early and unfortunate marriage, which had, as Bob put it, "finished him with all women" as far as romance was concerned.

Perversely, I wished that I might evoke from Gordon the same measure of affectionate interest that Bob did.

I studied him, concentrating on his moods and expressions; I willed the image of myself into his mind. And suddenly I found myself possessed of an intense and absorbing love for him.

A strange love, in which there was no element of disloyalty to my mate.

I was hurt by Gordon's unawareness of my love and me.

Came the day when Gordon was leaving for duty in the West. The parting was hard for all three of us. Bob and I were at the field to see him off. News had come in of the death in line of duty of a pilot we all knew well. Bob had left us for a minute to get particulars of the crash

My eyes were fastened on Gordon's face—it seemed as if I could not let him go in silence. Suddenly his face was illuminated as if by the light of a great revelation.

"Judy—I may be next—perhaps we may never meet again. It might be best that way, for I have just realized that I love you."

I BIT hard on my lip and looked away, my eyes blurring with tears. "You, too—" he breathed. "Oh, Judy!"

I nodded. He drew me into the shade of a great silver wing and kissed me. He took a winged emblem from his coat and pinned it over my heart.

A few minutes later he was soaring away into an opal-tinted evening sky. A few hours later his ship fell like a flaming star to earth.

Over my heart I wear his wings, always. And in my heart—his memory.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

IT'S A TOUGH JOB, trying to write a column these days. What can you say? What dare you think? Everything you've built on, believed in, going smash. And always, with every mail, there's that flood of furious or frantic letters, saying that civilization is on its way out.

"Well, I'm neither very brave nor very wise. But there's one thing I know, beyond all doubting, and that's this—YOU CAN'T KILL CIVILIZATION.

You can dent it, plenty. Double-cross it. Expose its hooey and hypocrisy. And wipe out its material achievements. But no man or group of men—however fierce or ruthless, persuasive or powerful—CAN WRECK CIVILIZATION.

For Civilization lies beyond the reach of guns and the range of poison gas. Laws cannot touch it nor prisons bind it. It has nothing to do with territories or treaties. It does not depend on culture, mechanical ingenuity or scientific discovery. Remove all these . . . blot them out of existence . . . return man to his savage jungle . . . take away all his hard won wisdom—Yet Civilization would still go on!

CIVILIZATION IS NOT a tangible achievement. IT is a spiritual hunger . . . a vague but persistent outreaching . . . A dream in the heart of man. And nothing can ever quench that dream

It has been said that "if there were no God, it would be necessary to invent him." And the same necessity that would make Man invent a Savior lies behind that desire—that divine discontent—we call Civilization.

Look back through history and you can trace the development of that desire . . . a development that has never ceased nor faltered, even though the race was reduced, again and again, to its bloody beginnings.

It brought man up out of his marshes - that discontent . . . down from the trees where he scurried with his cousin apes . . . out of his smoke-blacked caves.

It has changed him from the weakest and most stupid of all mammals to the upright, inspired son of God

It was in him in the beginning . . . it will be in him to the end

THERE HAVE been hysterical Hitlers before, sulky Stalins and bellowing Mussolinis. There have been invasions—massacres. And governments have towered and fallen again and again. But always man's secret dream—God's hidden spark—has gone on. And nothing can ever stop it.

SALLY KEITH will be one of the stars of the burlesque bill opening Monday at the Globe.

Globe Theater Goes Burlesque

Washington street's historic Globe Theater, where 50 years ago Weber and Fields established burlesque, again becomes the home of glorified burlesque.

Completely renovated and with Max Michaels as its manager and Ben Bernard as its producer, the Globe Theater resumes its original character next Monday at 12 m. noontime for its first show.

From then on, there will be three shows daily, starting at 12 noon and at 2.30 and 8.30 p. m.

For the impressive opening show, Manager Michaels has secured the services of Sally Keith, known as burlesque's highest-priced star.

The Columbia Theater's indispensable comic, the enormously popular Mandy Kay, heads the show's comedy department, assisted by "Boob" Schultz and Al Phair.

There will also be Nora Ford, "Swing Girl From the South," and a song-and-dance chorus of 30 girls.

STUNNING COLOR COMBINATIONS IN MUSICAL AT SHUBERT

Scenery, Costumes of 'Too Many Girls' Highly Praised

Costume designer, Raoul Pene du Bois, is responsible for the stunning and unusual color combinations that have captivated even the least observant patrons.

Says du Bois:

"I try to use my scenery as a background and have my costumes serve a definite purpose. It is my theory that the chorus changes—there are six of them in 'Too Many Girls'—must serve as a suitable contrast to the scenery—not a clash."

One of the most effective color schemes in the show is the brown and blue number, the chorus-girls in their lovely, smokey-blue bouffant tulle dancing-frocks with their seal-brown accents and Desi Arnaz, the Latin-American heart-stimulator, in brown trousers and pale blue jacket. This is the "Too Many Girls" number.

Another smooth color-scheme is in the "glamour-pants" skit, in which the dancing-girls appear in white crepe pajamas, girdled with orange crepe and topped by bronzy-green wool boleros. Their fleet-footed partners wear white trousers and coats of the same bronzy-green.

Despite his exotic name, Raoul Pene du Bois was born in Staten Island 27 years ago. He has costumed the following productions: "Thumbs Up," "Jumbo," "Life Begins at 8:30," Billy Rose's Fort Worth and Cleveland Aquacades, C. B. Cochran's "Home and Beauty," "Hooray for What?" "One For The Money," the Ciro Manana shows and Billy Rose's Aquacade at the World's Fair.

The Broadway premiere will follow the run here.

The company boasts also in addition to a cast of dancing principals and singers, such top flight performers as Selden Bennett, Virginia Card, Royal Beal, John Cherry and Ralph Magelssen.

Mansfield Given 3-Month Sentence

Found guilty of extorting money from relatives of a Concord Reformatory inmate whose release he fraudulently "guaranteed," former Assistant Clerk of Committees John M. Mansfield of Somerville was sentenced to three months in East Cambridge jail today.

Sentence was imposed in Middlesex Superior Court by Judge Winfield D. Gray. The latter said he had spent the whole night considering what penalty would be "fair and proper" in the case.

"The offense was the more reflagrant since its victims were persons of small means and without education," Judge Gray commented.

"Furthermore, the defendant's representation that he could by undue influence connive the release of a man serving a penal sentence indicated a contempt of our pardon and parole system, already under fire in the public press and the legislature."

The judge told defense counsel that the severity of the sentence he proposed to impose might be lessened if restitution were made to the victims, who were mulcted of $216.

RESTITUTION ARRANGED

A recess was called, and the restitution was arranged.

Attorney Robert A. Shea, representing Mansfield, asked leniency on the ground that the defendant had recently been crippled by loss of both legs in an accident.

He said if Mansfield were released on probation, he might be able to retain his job under civil service regulations.

After Judge Gray had imposed the jail sentence, Mrs. Mansfield, who sat weeping in a corridor, collapsed and had to be taken to an anteroom.

Mansfield, himself, was helped from the courtroom by two attendants, who were obliged almost to carry him.

FURNITURE PRICES TO RISE, SAYS KANE

A warning that higher prices already are here was sounded by Harry Kane, president of the Kane Company, at the annual birthday dinner of the executive, management and sales staff of that organization at Hotel Kenmore.

But for the birthday sale, prices remain at the previous levels, with some merchandise actually lower than a month ago.

After paying tribute to his many employes, some of them with him since the day he opened his first store in New England, Mr. Kane said:

"We must depend on our customers' continued good-will. We have stocked, for our customers' protection, 5000 more blankets and a thousand more rugs than we carried at this time last year.

"We have about 500 more bedroom suites—and have even stocked mattresses and living-room suites—which we've never done before. This has been done to give Kane's customers protection against price-rises.

"Our Anniversary Sale values this year are beyond compare with anything we've been able to do before. Not a single August Sale price has been increased—and that in a few instances, we've even made some Anniversary Specials below August's prices.

"Not one penny price increase will be made on any piece of merchandise now in our stocks."

OFFICER'S BEATING PROBED

Mysterious circumstances under which Patrolman John Loughlin, 48, of the Lynn police department suffered severe head injuries yesterday were being investigated by Lynn and Swampscott police today.

Officer Loughlin, married and living in Autumn st., Lynn, remained unconscious and at Lynn Hospital for several hours, so badly beaten that he could not be recognized. How he was taken there remained a mystery also.

It was learned that the officer had attended the convention of the Massachusetts Police Relief Association at the New Ocean House in Swampscott, and was found nearby at daybreak.

Brother officers who called at the hospital failed to recognize his swollen features, and it was several hours before his identity became known.

Physicians, at first fearing he had "suffered a fractured skull, later diagnosed his injuries as a brain concussion, cuts and bruises.

Police Chief Edward D. Callahan of Lynn, heading the investigation with Chief Walter W. Reeves of Swampscott, said Loughlin was incoherent for several hours, but finally stated he was beaten up on Broad st., Lynn, which he patrols while on duty.

Woman's Nude Body in Brush

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 5 (INS)—The nude body of a slender brunette woman in her early thirties, murdered probably three months ago, was found today in a lonely thicket in suburban Livingston. She had been stripped and clubbed to death.

Near the murder scene were scattered bits of attire, remnants of a dress, a silk stocking, lingerie and a black, toeless high-heeled slipper. An empty whisky bottle also was found.

2 Mission Hill Boys Held as Firebugs

With the arrest of two 12-year-old boys, allegedly caught in the act of starting a fire police believe they have halted a series of incendiary fires in the Mission Hill building project area.

The boys were arrested by Captain Thomas F. Casey of the Roxbury Crossing station during a tour of the area.

Dresden Met Fate After Sea Terror

Admiral Von Spee's Far East battle fleet in the Pacific.

Steaming south with Von Spee's squadron from Easter island, the Dresden played a valiant part in the historic battle of Coronel toward nightfall of Nov. 1 1915 when Admiral Craddock's British cruiser squadron was disastrously defeated and put to flight, a naval reverse of World War I far more grave that the recent loss of the airplane carrier Courageous in present World War II.

At Coronel the British cruisers Good Hope and Monmouth went to the bottom under the hammering of Von Spee's German guns. And the cruiser Glasgow, that finally destroyed the Dresden, was among the British vessels that were forced to flee.

British warships came soon afterward Howard, for at the subsequent battle of the Falklands, on the Atlantic side of the Horn, Von Spee's fleet was obliterated, only the Dresden escaping.

Now again the Dresden was pursued as she had been before, by every ship the British could spare to hunt her down and exterminate her. For weeks and even months at a time she hid in perilous, uncharted Magellan Strait channels, her decks swept by Antarctic blizzards, her comings and goings watched only by screaming sea terns and solemn penguins.

At last she started her zigzag final cruise up the Pacific coast of South America, always in need of coal, always hunted and pursued, always taking toll of allied commerce when occasion offered.

IN the Atlantic she had destroyed a British grain ship and another carrying Welsh coal, and she had boarded and examined half a dozen others, terrorizing merchant shipping generally and demoralizing the trade routes.

In the Pacific she shelled and pursued a British passenger liner, bound for Valparaise, and captured and destroyed several British grain and coal carriers. Here, as in the Atlantic, greatest damage done by the Dresden was the costly terror she inspired and the sailing cancellations she forced.

Furthermore, month after month, she kept busy at her heels British cruisers enough to have done almost priceless service guarding U. S.-to-Europe sea lanes, had they been free for the duty.

One lone German cruiser—and the navies of two great nations, in full control of two oceans, couldn't find her from August, 1914, to mid-March of 1915!

No wonder, looking back on the record, naval experts shake their heads so doefully now when allied merchant ships like the Booth Line Clement begin to go down and Nazi sea raiders are blamed.

The oceans are still broad. And the Dresden still lives in the memory of the British Admiralty. Even though her bones have been lying, almost a quarter of a century now, in Cumberland bay under the sheer, frowning cliffs of Juan Fernadez island!

THIEVES' PARADISE

Even Judge Is Victim

NEW YORK, Oct. 5 (INS)—State Supreme Court Justice John E. McGeehan warned prospective jurors to watch their valuables while sitting in cases in the imposing new $8,000,000 Bronx County courthouse.

"In the past three or four weeks I have been the victim of petty thieves in the amount of about $500," he declared from the bench while swearing in a new panel. "They stole my hat and coat, and even my soap and towel.

"I am having the locks changed on desks and closets in the judicial chambers, and am calling in an expert to change the tumblers on the safe because they contain valuable court papers.

"What I am telling you may sound shocking, but you must watch your hats and coats. Otherwise they are not safe."

EVERY YEAR it seems there's an important wedding or debut in the Roosevelt family . . . Last night Anne Delano Grant at Dedham did her bit to continue the family tradition by making her social début at a tea-dance given by her grandmother, Mrs. Frank Cabot Paine of Westwood . . .

Anne is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Galt Grant, and a granniece of Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of the President . . . Before the dance her parents gave a dinner for the ushers and a number of her closest friends, including several girls who were in her class at Chatham Hall School in the South . . .

Seated around the festive board were such prominent debs as petite dark haired Lee Thacher, blonde Mary Whitney, Margie McKean, Jean Saltonstall, Mary Coolidge, Gertrude Shaw, Eleanor Motley, Louise Sargent, Elvine Richard and Anne Elliot . . . John G. Palfrey, Jr., brother of the famous tennis player, Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, was head usher . . .

The debutante wore a picturesque gown of ice blue tulle and carried a frilled bouquet of pink roses and larkspur . . . Mrs. Paine wore a bouffant gown of her favorite shade of green which set off her reddish gold hair . . .

ATTENDING HARVARD football games and dances will be more exciting than ever for Marietta Howe this winter, since her escort will be her fiance, Richard L. Davisson, Jr., member of the Crimson's senior class. Announcement of their engagement is being made by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Parkman D. Howe of Needham. Mr. Davisson is the son of Mrs. Paul Pryibil and R. L. Davisson of New York.

Miss Giocanna Cinelli of Florence, Italy, was a house guest of Mrs. Paine for the occasion, and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Thorndike (Jeannie Paine), of Milton, Margaret Finney of Baltimore, and Sally Smith of Miami Beach were among the many other party guests . . .

THOUGH LALLA WITHINGTON is studying at the Nursery Training School, learning how to teach youngsters in settlement houses, she doesn't believe in all work and no play . . . She and Hetty Millar, one of her sister debs of last winter, have an apartment together on Hereford street, just around the corner from the school, and go home to Plymouth week-ends for strenuous games of football and other sports . . . Lalla is also turning the apartment into an experimental cooking laboratory . . . She hasn't tried brides' biscuits yet, but she turned out a unique batch of cookies the other day . . . and learned by sad experience that there's a difference between broiling and baking cookies . . . She broiled 'em! . . .

During the summer Mrs. Myers enjoyed a bit of relaxation from business details of the series at her summer home in Kennebunkport, and Mrs. Whittington and her husband had a wonderful trip to Scotland and England . . .

Dr. Eddy's Question Box

Tested and Approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau

IS A FAT WHOSE MELTING POINT IS ABOVE BODY TEMPERATURE DIGESTIBLE?

—By DR. WALTER H. EDDY—
Director of Good Housekeeping Bureau

Questions concerning foods, sanitation and health will be answered only if a stamped, addressed envelope accompanies each request. No exceptions can be made to this rule. Personal advice can not be given, nor can food or drug supplies be furnished. Address Dr. Walter H. Eddy, 57th St. at 8th ave., New York City.

We have had repeated inquiries lately as to the effect of the melting point of a fat on its digestion in the body. The question is usually formulated as follows:

"Is a fat whose melting point is above body temperature digestible?"

First, let us make clear how fats are digested. Not being soluble in the watery digestive juices of the body, the digestive enzymes have to attack them on the surfaces. It follows, then, that the more finely divided the swallowed fat, the quicker the digestive action. It also follows that the more liquid a fat is, the easier it is to emulsify it, which means breaking it up into small particles. Hence fats that melt at or below body temperatures are most readily emulsified and most speedily digested.

But this does not mean that we can not digest a fat whose melting point is above body temperature. We can and do, but the process takes longer, and the higher the melting point the slower the digestion.

Prof. Henry C. Sherman of Columbia University, in his textbook on "Food Products," cites scientific data which bear on the digestibility of fats. The following are from his table:

Nature of Fat	Melting Point	Body Temperature	Per Cent Digestible
Pure Stearin (Solid Fat	140° F.	Ave. 98.6° F.	9.14%
Stearin and Almond Oil	131° F.	"	89.4
Mutton Fat	120° F.	"	92.6
Lard	109° F.	"	97.4
Bacon Fat	93° F.	"	97.2
Goose Fat	77° F.	"	97.5
Olive Oil	32°-50° F.	"	97.7

You will note from this table that lard melts only at a temperature considerably above body temperature, but that it is quite as digestible as bacon fat, goose fat and olive oil, the melting points of which are all below body temperature. Commenting on these results, Dr. Sherman says:

"These results show good utilization and no significant differences in digestibility among fats melting at or below 109 degrees F., while with melting points from 120 degrees to 131 degrees F. the lowers were considerable, and with stearin melting at 140 degrees F. much the greater part failed of digestion. Notice, however, that the admixture of sufficient almond oil to lower the melting point a few degrees resulted in very greatly increased digestibility."

The latter observation is important, for in hydrogenating oils—combining them with hydrogen in such a way that they become solidified and hardened—part of the fat formed is stearin; it is true that this in itself is less than 10 per cent digestible, but in combination with other fats in the mixture—those of lower melting point—the stearin does not greatly affect digestibility. In other words, hydrogenated oils have a high digestibility, provided the melting point of the mixture as a whole is not much above body temperature.

We have definite physiological tests on hydrogenated cottonseed oil, reported by Prof. Philip Hawk in the Journal of Biological Chemistry in 1915 (vol. 23, p. 505). Dr. Hawk found the melting point of the hydrogenated cottonseed oil he used was 97 degrees F., and he measured its digestibility against a lard that melted at 113 degrees F. The lard showed 94.7 per cent digestibility, and the hydrogenated cotton seed oil 93.35 per cent digestibility.

It is evident from the above that to say a fat is indigestible if it fails to melt at body temperature is absurd and totally contrary to measured observations. It is also evident that other factors than melting point influence the human system's ability to break up and digest a given fat.

Hot Food for School Child

By MARTHA LEE

With the busy schedule of work, study and play facing the children now that they are back to school, it is more than ever vital that they have hot, nourishing and plentiful meals. Especially is the school day lunch important. It's a recharger of vitality and strength. Yet it must consist of food that is easily assimilated. And it should contain hot food.

A generous bowl of hot soup made of vegetables and meat, or a vegetable puree and milk offers one way of providing hot food. Hot chocolate is another, and such dishes as pork and beans, eggs, macaroni and cheese, creamed vegetables are all good, nourishing and energy building.

Here are some suggestions for high energy-value luncheons to set before your children when they come tearing in at noon:

MENU I
Highland Vegetable Broth
Peanut Butter and Bacon Sandwiches
Hot Cocoa

MENU II
Puffy Omelet with Mushroom Sauce
Buttered Carrots
Bread and Butter
Baked Apple Milk

MENU III
Macaroni and Cheese
Hearts of Lettuce Salad
Whole Wheat Bread
Butterscotch Cookies
Banana Milk Shake

MENU IV
Cream of Pea Soup
(For this add an equal quantity of milk to condensed pea soup)
Chicken Loaf Sandwiches
Green Apple Sauce
Milk

MENU V
Jellied Vegetable Salad with Egg Slices
Bread and Butter Sandwiches
Old Fashioned Rice Pudding
Hot Chocolate

HIGHLAND VEGETABLE BROTH
1 can condensed Scotch broth
1 can condensed vegetable soup
2 can water
Combine the soups. Then add the water, using the soup can for a measure. Heat. Serves 5 to 7.

MUSHROOM SAUCE FOR PUFFY OMELET
1 can condensed cream of mushroom soup
¼ cup milk

Mix the milk into the cream of mushroom soup. Heat and pour sauce on platter around the omelet.

PUFFY OMELET
4 eggs, separated
½ tsp. salt
Dash of pepper
¼ cup milk
1 tbsp. butter
Parsley

Beat egg yolks until thick and light; add seasonings and milk; fold into stiffly beaten egg whites. Turn into buttered, hot 9-inch frying pan or omelet pan and cook over low heat for 3 to 5 minutes, or until omelet puffs up and is browned on bottom. (Test by raising edge of omelet with spatula.) Place in moderate oven (350 deg. F.) for 10 to 15 minutes, or until top springs back when pressed with finger. Cut about 1-inch incisions at opposite sides and crease down through center in line with cuts; then fold carefully on crease by slipping spatula under half of omelet to fold over. Slip on to hot platter and garnish with parsley; if an omelet pan is used, merely fold over; omelet will shrink slightly when removed from pan. Serve at once. Makes 6 servings.

SCHOOL DAY lunches should be both hot and nourishing. A generous bowl of hot soup made of vegetables and meat, or a vegetable puree and milk offers one way of providing that hot food.

You Can Be Beautiful

Reservation on Beauty

By ARLINE GOULD

IT'S JUST about this time of the year that you really start feeling dismal about the state of your skin . . . after the long, drying heat of summer. And it seems that the soft, unlined skin you once knew belongs to a happier yesterday.

It needn't belong to any time but the present, with a good reservation on tomorrow's beauty . . . if you coddle it with a very special "reconstituent" cream which is nothing but pure, unadulterated goodness for a dry, aging complexion.

It's a delightful affair for sensitive, undernourished skin—containing as it does the oils such a skin craves. You'll find it superlatively joyous . . . using this cream, because it is so smooth, and spreads so lightly, liquefying instantly. Use it when you shower or bathe, before going out of an evening, as well as overnight.

They say the real secret behind this marvel is that it contains an active ingredient that will restore sluggish skin to youthful and normal activity. It is produced right here in Boston, in a scrupulously kept salon, by a skin hygienist who really knows what goes on in every layer of your tender epidermis . . . and knows what to do about it!

If you'd like to learn about this tender, nourishing cream for sensitive complexions, and insure against the weathering of icy winds and howling nor'westers, phone Arline Gould, LIBerty 4000, week-days until 5.30, or write, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Good Manners

Toast Making Easily Overdone

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1—What is the proper thing to say when the first drinks are served at a party and about half a dozen people make toasts? I am at a loss what to say, especially when two or three people have said the same thing.

2—When fourteen-year-old children are introduced to grownups, do they repeat the same "How do you do?"

3—When one is visiting and the host, entering, says to a guest, a married woman, "It is nice seeing you again," what is the proper reply? G.

1—Don't let the making of a toast "get you down." Some people are born toastmakers, while others never can or want to do much about it. Usually it isn't necessary to make a toast, and especially it isn't necessary when six toasts already have been offered! This toastmaking can definitely be overdone, and it's often so infectious that guests feel they can't drink a drink without proposing a toast. So your not making a toast may help to bring casualness back to the party.

However, I've often noticed that, even when many toasts have been proposed, a toast to the hostess or to the host or hosts may not be thought of. So maybe you would like to keep this in mind.

2—Yes, this "How do you do" is the correct thing for children, as well as adults, to say when they are acknowledging an introduction.

3—When anyone says to a person "It is nice seeing you again," that person answers, something like this "Thank you. I'm so happy to be here and see you again, Bob (or 'Mr. Allen')."

Wants Photo

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I went with a young man for six months, during which time I gave him my photograph in a rather expensive frame. It is now almost four months since I have seen or heard from him and I feel that I should like to have my picture returned. Would it be proper for me to write, asking him to return it, as it is probably only cluttering up his other belongings? SUNTANNED.

As you have not seen this young man for four months and he has made no effort to continue the acquaintance, it would be proper to ask him to return the photo.

RENO Rendezvous

by LESLIE FORD

THE WOMAN at the slot machine gave me a quick smile from a pair of shrewd merry blue eyes above a fine aquiline nose and brightly rouged lips.

Her hair, cropped and waved, may have been auburn once and was certainly henna now, and her face, which must have been astonishingly lovely, was still very handsome, if a little stamped with a lifetime of determination.

She was all in all—except possibly for the Western group—rather the sort of person you'd expect to see entertaining a diplomat at the Sulgrave Club than pulling the handle of a slot machine in a hotel bar in Reno.

She fished a five-dollar bill out of her bag and summoned the waiter. "Here, Eddie—get me some more dimes. I bet I've put a hundred dollars in these crooked machines of yours."

Eddie, bald and wrinkled yet oddly juvenile, like some very ancient little boy, grinned and trotted toward the bar, and I went on in . . because, in a brief lull, I'd heard a voice that I'd come three thousand miles to hear. Just as I stepped in, I saw, in one of the mirrored columns that give the cocktail lounge at the Hotel Washoe an extent and crowded gaiety that it doesn't have, a slim girl in riding clothes, with red-gold hair in a long loosely-waved bob around her sun-browned throat, rise suddenly from a crowd of people around a low table, in front of a curving red leather seat under the windows at the far end of the bar.

A man's voice said, "Aw, sit down, Judy—what the h——!"

"DON'T GO EASTERN"

I think I should have recognized it as the voice of the man they'd called Whitey at the airport even if I hadn't seen him half rise and take the glass out of my niece's hand.

Another voice said, "Don't go Eastern on us, Judy."

I saw Dex Cromwell pull himself elegantly to his feet and stand, looking down into her suddenly upturned face in a way that I suppose was intended to be humorous and masterful, at the same time. And it apparently was, for I saw Judy's stiff little back suddenly crumple.

"Oh, I'm sorry!!" she said, with a short odd laugh that seemed so unlike the girl I knew that I was really disturbed.

She picked up her cocktail glass and emptied it and set it down. Nobody had said anything for an instant. They were all watching her.

As I came up I saw that Kaye Gorman was sitting there, watching her, too, her eyes a curious cat-green in a face that otherwise was as near expressionless as a wax doll's.

Nobody had noticed me coming toward them. Not until I said, "Hello, Judy."

For an instant Judy Bonner's lithe figure, taller and slimmer in trim brown jodhpurs than I'd remembered it, stiffened, perfectly taut.

Then she whirled around, her face the oddest mixture of the most conflicting emotions . . . surprise, and hurt, and something else that I shouldn't have noticed. I'm afraid, except for the way she blinked suddenly, fighting to keep back the tears.

She didn't say a word. She took one step to where I was standing and grabbed hold of my arm and held it in hers.

Then she turned around to the man behind her.

"Dex!" she cried. "You told me she didn't get off the plane!"

Dexter Cromwell gave me one surprised look. Then his handsome face wrinkled in the most engaging mock despair.

"But Judy—you said your aunt! We saw this lady—but we thought she was just another customer, out for the cure. She doesn't look like anybody's aunt . . . not even yours, darling!"

He stepped forward and put out his hand with a frank, charming smile. "How do you do, Mrs. Latham! You really don't you know—look like anybody's aunt!"

"Well, I might feel flattered," I said, "—if I hadn't seen you so instantly engrossed with my fellow passenger."

It was a perfectly horrid thing to say, I suppose, especially as I had heard Whitey say "Hey—where's the old lady?" And in a sense it was rather flattering that it hadn't occurred to any of them that I was she.

Dex Cromwell smiled again.

"Oh come, come, lady—let's be friends!"

He looked at Kaye Gorman.

"Rescue me, Kaye! Tell them I didn't even know you were coming out!"

The blonde girl gave him the most provokingly open smile.

BATTLE OF WITS

"Darling—don't tell me! I thought that was what you were there for, to meet me! That's all I've been living on!"

She sipped her daikiri, her baby blue eyes wide open above its frosted rim.

I jumped as a voice spoke in my ear. The man called Whitey had got up and was standing by me. "Look what you started," he said out of one side of his mouth. He turned to some nondescript young woman behind him. "If that ain't the payoff!" he added. "Remember I said half-way back I wondered if the dame with the Park Avenue accent was the kid's aunt?"

Somebody said, practically, "You'll wind up behind the eight ball yourself, if you don't keep out of this."

It sounded sensible to me. I was beginning to wish I'd kept out. Judy's strong brown fingers were gripping my arm like a vise. The thin edges of her perfect little nostrils were quivering.

"Let's go upstairs, Grace," she said quietly. She'd never, even when she was in pigtails, dignified me with an Aunt to my name. "So long—we'll be seeing you."

Whitey spoke suddenly as we turned to go. "Hey, take your antique, Judy. I guess that's what you call it."

Judy turned back. I looked around.

He handed her an odd-looking implement. It was a black rusty piece of wrought iron, about a foot long, that looked like a meat skewer except that at one end a hook was set in it alongside a small hollow cylinder that contained an old piece of candle dropping over the side. A the base of the short candle holder was a metal thumb piece.

"What's that?" Kaye Gorman asked curiously.

Dex Cromwell took it. "It's an old candle pick they used in the mines," he said.

Whitey fingered the sharp pointed end. "They stuck it in the timbers," he said. "Or they hung it up."

He pointed to the hook behind the candle cylinder. "You get it up in Virginia City?"

Judy nodded.

"You could kill a guy with that, Judy."

Judy nodded again.

"That's what the man at Virginia City said—and he said it wouldn't be the first time it had been used for that."

She poked the end of it into her own flat little stomach and smiled, more like the Judy I knew, all of a sudden, than she had been before. "In fact, I'd rather thought of using it myself."

Whitey grinned, looking at me. "I'll bet," he said.

Judy took my arm again. "Come along, darling," she said. We went out. I was aware of a curious silence that we left behind us, and then, out of it, I heard Kaye Gorman . . . and with no possible hope that Judy wasn't hearing her too. "No wonder Clem made her come out. I thought it was only his sanity he was afraid of, but Heavens, it's his life too!"

"I HATE HER"

I felt Judy's body stiffen, her hand tighten in a little spasm on my arm. Then she relaxed suddenly, with what seemed to me a rather woeful attempt at sang froid.

"I'd especially like to use it on that woman," she said.

She gripped my arm again. "Oh, I hate her, Grace—I hate her!"

"I know, angel," I said. "But "

She laughed. "I'm sorry! Don't pay any attention to me, darling."

We got out of the elevator. Judy unlocked the door of her apartment. She stood for a moment looking at the table, with a little oddly-bewildered look, as if something she had been dreading had escaped her. Then her eyes roved around the room.

"If you're looking for that paper," I said, throwing my hat on the sofa, "I put it in the waste basket."

I looked at her. Her face was crumpled, suddenly, and I don't know what happened to the space between us, for the next instant Judy Bonner was in my arms, crying as if her heart would break. She was also sitting on my hat, which I'd paid $35 for in a mad moment in New York.

"I thought you'd seen it in Chicago, and hadn't got off the plane, when they didn't find you," she sobbed miserably. "And here I'd been waiting for you to come, and SHE came instead! I . . . I just thought I couldn't bear it!"

"Oh, lamb, don't be stupid," I said. I was practically weeping myself.

She sat up and dabbed at her eyes with a wadded handkerchief she fished out of her jodhpurs pocket, and sniffled.

Then she gave me a sort of miserable smile.

"If you do that in an alley in Reno, somebody tries to sell you dope," she said. Then she smiled again. "I always say you can pick up useful information in the most unlikely places if you have an open mind."

"So it seems," I said. I was glad to be able to laugh at something. "I see by the papers you've gone in for gambling—I hope you don't do dope too."

"No," she said. Her gray eyes lighted for an instant, and became grave again. "I keep strictly to minor vices. They say a lot of divorcees do go in for dope, but I doubt it, unless they did before they came. They clean the place up once in a while—but they do everywhere, don't they?"

"Rescue me, Kay! Tell them I didn't even know you were coming out," Dex Cromwell laughed.

"They seem to," I said.

"They say Whitey takes dope."

She put her miner's candle pick which had been sticking uncomfortably into my ribs, on the table.

"But that's one of the charming things about Reno—you can hear anything you like about anybody."

She shrugged. "Maybe Whitey does take dope, but he's been awfully decent to me. Of couse, you've got to watch him. He'll take you for a ride every chance he gets, so don't ever let him suggest a straight game of blackjack.

"He's just naturally crooked, and as long as you remember that, he's really a grand guy. He'd just cheat his grandmother out of her last cent but then he'd turn around and give somebody else his last cent."

"I see," I said—not seeing, really. "And . . . your friend Mr. Cromwell?"

Judy's clear brow clouded. "He's all right," she said quietly.

JUDY CONFESSES

She went abruptly to the cocktail bar and poured out a stiff jolt of scotch. In the mirror I could see her face, unhappy and bitter again. She shot the glass half-full of soda, raised it to her lips, and put it down again without touching it.

"I don't know why I do that," she said abruptly. "I don't like it."

I tried to poke my hat back into shape.

"It's universally regarded as one of the least successful ways of solving emotional problems, Mrs. Bonner," I said. I got up. "I'm sorry, Judy. I didn't realize he was such a . . . a sore point. But I'd just thought in my old-fashioned way that if he's to be a member of the family shortly, I'd rather like to know—if not who his great-grandfather's father was—at least when you met him. But think nothing of it, darling."

I took my bag off the table.

"Are you dining with me, or have you got a date? I can manage beautifully. I've got a thousand letters to write."

"You're coming to the River House with us," she said.

And just as I got to my door she came quickly after me.

"I'm sorry, Grace," she whispered contritely, rubbing her nose against my shoulder. If you bring children up in stables, I suppose you've got to expect them to act rather like horses. "I'm such a pig . . . and I don't mean to be . . . not really!"

"Pigs are quite sensible people," I said. "You aren't acting like a pig, darling. You're just being silly. But let's skip it. I don't want to know anything you don't want to tell me."

She went back to the table and stood, opening and closing the silver cigarette box.

"I've known Dex quite a while," she said, in a dull little voice. "Before I came to Reno."

She went on, not very steadily and without raising her head.

"I . . . I said I'd marry him. Before I . . . left home."

"That's swell, then," I said.

Is there a hint of impending tragedy in the talk about murder? Don't miss tomorrow's thrilling chapter.

Peace Now Pivot Of Financial Talk

The effects of European war on United States economy is fast losing favor as the favorite board and banking room topic . . . In its stead we find concern centered in the problem of peace versus United States recovery . . .

CONSTANT REFERENCES . . . To a truce or an armistice, no matter how vague, were bound to leave a mark on certain types of optimism . . . Particularly that which embraced the wildest sort of boom expectations . . . On the other hand observers taking moderated views of the outlook are not allowing the thought of peace to plunge them into the depths . . . The answer is found the latter school's strict adherence to fundamentals . . . In their opinon two connected events have simply exaggerated domestic recovery's progress . . . First war accentuated the upturn . . . And now peace threatens to return it to the pre-war pace . . . Moderates didn't believe the boom talk of dreamers . . . Now they refuse to consider the possibility of collapse . . .

DEPRESSIONS . . . In the ordinary course of economic events are the outgrowth of excesses . . . Years of over-buying, over-production and over-speculation furnish the germs of deterioration . . . Price rises and industrial improvement at present are only tainted with war boom at worst . . . Few will insist otherwise . . . For they know time alone has been too short to permit tremendous excesses . . . That a final peace will bring shock in its wake is more than likely . . . That it will start a new downward spiral of long duration is not compatible with fact . . . First things are improving internally with the U. S. . . . Second big and important export trade areas have been opened to American industry . . . War's end will not close them overnight . . . Third, foreign reconstruction must be undertaken on a fairly large scale . . . Fourth, rearmament in the United States is going to be carried on in a very large way for some time to come . . . Seacoast, aircraft and a two-ocean navy mean big business . . . And finally nothing but peace accompanied by unheard of disarmament will halt Allied preparedness moves . . .

STOCK PRICES . . . Have shown Nothing of late that warrants Adding to comments here earlier in the week . . . The widely followed averages are obviously postponing definite action pending outcome of "peace of war" . . . In the event it is the former a sharp sinking spell is anticipated . . . One carrying the Dow Jones industrial index off for a maximum correction of the recent upswing . . . Say close to the 136 level . . . Then after a period of rest while nerves calm down and adjustments are made to normal conditions we think the bull market will develop again . . . But unless conditions change more than anticipated no new bear trend is expected to unroll . . .

UTILITY SHARES . . . Have been roughly handled for many reasons in recent months . . . With the group as a whole falling into something resembling disfavor . . . We think a change in considering power and light shares is in the making . . . For years industrials have been considered not as a solid group but as specialties . . . Steels, machinery issues, textiles and so on . . . Rails were treated in much the same way . . . Grangers, coolers, industrial center carriers and so forth . . . Utilities have been a lump classification . . . With few making an effort to consider them as having divisional qualities . . . Now it looks as though this long deferred analytic view was being applied . . . Industrial utilities, natural gas companies, water works concerns are emerging as favored opportunities . . . It is likely to result in special strength and weakness . . .

OUTSTANDING . . . Promising among utilities at present, according to reliable chart readers, are . . . Columbia Gas, American Water Works, American Power, American Gas, North American and several others . . . All have built up good base formations suggesting strong rallies . . . And since they have not been over-exploited on the upside all could do well . . . And in the event of peace they should benefit from a reversal of general disfavor . . . However matters go, we would stick with the industrial center power suppliers . . . The natural gas producers . . . And the water works concerns with an industrial angle.

U. S. Deficit Now $976,060,301

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5 (INS)—Building up its defenses in a world at war cost the United States $331,246,116 during the first three months of the fiscal year—a 25 per cent increase over last year's first quarter defense bill — and helped boost the federal deficit $275,000,000 higher than it was a year ago.

Treasury figures today revealed the government took in $1,446,615,184 between July 1 and Sept. 30, and spent $2,422,675,488 — leaving it in the red by $976,060,301. Last year at this time the deficit was only $709,846,961.

Treasury Department officials, however, were not pessimistic over the outlook. They pointed out that heavy spending in the last fiscal year—President Roosevelt's second major pump-priming effort—did not begin until the October-December quarter.

Prospects for holding this year's deficit well within the $3,426,313,200 estimated by President Roosevelt are excellent, they said, particularly if the current pick-up is continued during the next three months, a development which would be reflected in the March income tax returns.

Stocks Rise After Mixed Early Trading

NEW YORK, Oct. 5 (AP)—Steels, motors and utilities led the stock market into a rally today after it had fiddled around most of the morning in a narrow price range.

From the quiet start the pace was never fast. Near noon leaders had added fractions to around 2 points.

Ahead were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, duPont, U. S. Rubber, United Aircraft, Western Union, American & Foreign Power preferred, Consolidated Edison, American Car & Foundry, Westinghouse Electric, Eastman Kodak and Loew's.

Backward a bit were the metals, including Anaconda, although some shares in this group showed fractional improvement after the announcement all producers had raised the price of copper to 12¼ cents from 12 cents a pound. Rail and oil issues failed to get very far.

While traders awaited Hitler's speech tomorrow before committing themselves heavily, buying was a little more aggressive than it has been for several days.

Foreign markets were firm. Bonds were mixed and commodities trended upward.

Analysts noted that as a result of the current industrial upturn, bituminous coal production in this country for the week ended September 30 was the highest since December 1937, according to the National Coal Association. The estimate of 9,900,000 tons was based on incomplete carloadings figures.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5 (INS)—Noon stock exchange prices follow: Beth Steel 90, up 1¼; Chrysler 93¾, up 2; Genl. Mtrs. 54⅞, up ¾; Steel 75½, up ¾; Westinghouse Electric 118 up ¾; American Telephone 162½, up ½; DuPone 180½, up 1½; Allied Chemical 184, unchanged; Douglas Aircraft 76¼, up ½; American Car & Foundry 38¾, up 1½; American Smelting & Refining 54⅝, up ½; International Nickel 39¾, up ⅞.

"Unwarranted" Price Increases Fought

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5 (AP)—The Commerce Department's Business Advisory Council turned its attention today to Latin American Trade possibilities after joining in the administration's campaign against "unwarranted price increases."

The council, composed of 53 leaders in industry and finance, agreed yesterday to act as a liaison between government and business in keeping a watchful eye on the price situation resulting from the war in Europe.

The council said its action would be in a strictly voluntary capacity. Its membership consists of heads of many large corporations

N. E. T. & T. Gains

The New England Telephone and Telegraph Company reports a gain of 133 telephones in service during September compared with a loss of 2231 in September a year ago. For nine months of the present year there was a gain of 35,991 telephones, compared with a gain of 16,541 in the corresponding period of 1938.

RAW MATERIALS PLENTIFUL HERE

NEW YORK, Oct. 5 (AP)—A war emergency would now find the United States with adequate supplies of most vital raw materials, industrial steel sources said today.

Last February, Tom Girdler, chairman, Republic Steel Corp., said:

"Down in Kentucky buried in deep underground vaults we have stored away a vast pile of gold. The time might come when we would gladly give all of that gold for a pile of desperately needed manganese or chromium."

This warning, and others from industrialists, similar warnings from President Roosevelt and government officials, were given in time so that the United States is now believed to have at least a year's emergency store of essential imported ingredients used in steel making, these sources said.

Spurred by warnings, new federal legislation authorized expenditure in four years of $100,000,000 for vital war supplies. The first allotment of $10,000,000 of this fund was made available for spending this year for stores of four commodities—manganese, chromium, tin and tungsten.

Manganese is used today to deoxidize steel, thus aiding in producing a clean metal, and for its "toughening" effect.

There are also deposits in Cuba, the western "copper country," and in Virginia, Georgia and Alabama.

In the United States the deposits of manganese are low-grade ores, but rising prices, trade sources said, would probably stimulate production.

Tungsten is used for high speed tools, bulb filaments, chemicals and tanning of white leather. The first use is the important strategic one.

ICC Grants New Haven Rate Cut

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5 (AP)—The interstate Commerce Commission upheld today a reduction in the New Haven railroad's all-commodity freight rate between Harlem river, N. Y., and Boston, Mass., from 33 to 5 cents per 100 pounds and to increase the minimum shipment thereunder from 24,000 to 30,000 pounds.

The proposed reduction was to have gone into effect last June, but was suspended because of protests by New England otor carrier interests.

The present rate and minimum yields $79.20 per car, and the proposed rate and minimum would yield $75 per car, which reflects a reduction of 24.2 per cent in rates and an increase of 25 per cent in minimum, or a resulting reduction of only 5.3 per cent in revenue.

CARLOADINGS SCORE ADVANCE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5 (AP) — The Association of American Railroads reported today 834,640 cars of revenue freight were loaded during the week ended last Saturday.

This was an increase of 19,812 cars, or 2.4 per cent, compared with the preceding week; an increase of 137,732, or 19.8 per cent, compared with a year ago, and a decrease of 9221, or 1.1 per cent, compared with 1937.

Bank Figures Up for Week, But Under '38

NEW YORK, Oct. 5 (AP)—Bank clearings in 22 leading cities during the week ended Oct. 4 rose sharply above the preceding week, but lagged behind the comparable 1938 period for the first time in 11 weeks, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

The agency said the usual heavy first-of-the-month settlements caused the jump from a week ago.

Latest clearings of $5,736,02,0900 were 3.2 per cent less than $5,922,-725,000 last year but $542,146,000 more than the preceding week.

New York turnover of $3,397,-548,000 dropped 11.5 per cent from $3,841,114,000 in the like 1938 week.

Volume at the 21 outside cities stood at $2,388,544,000, which represented a gain of 12.3 per cent from $2,081,611,000 in 1938.

Except for Richmond, which dropped 16.6 per cent, all outside centers exceeded the 1938 totals, including Pittsburgh 23.1 per cent Atlanta 21.1, Dallas 20.4, Kansas City 19.3, Minneapolis 17.7, Detroit 16.8, Seattle 16.4, Baltimore 15.1.

Chicago clearings of $337,400,000 were 6.8 per cent above $315,900,-000 in the similar 1938 week.

BIG PRODUCERS BOOST COPPER

NEW YORK, Oct. 5 (AP)—One of the leading producing and smelting firms today boosted its selling price of domestic copper ¼ cent a pound to 12¼ cents, joining the large producing interests which holsted the metal that amount yesterday.

Fair sized tonnages were reported to have been taken at the newly established level. Addition of this major producer to the ranks of the higher priced sellers left one large and several smaller ones selling regular customers copper at 12 cents a pound, but metal circles said they were giving serious consideration to the establishment of a uniform price at the higher level.

Railroads Gain

NEW YORK, Oct. 4 (AP)—Executives of several leading eastern railroads reported today that September operations were marked by further big gains in revenues and carloadings.

Howard S. Palmer, president-trustee of the New Haven Railroad, said he expected the system would "break even" in September in contrast with a $2,900,000 operating loss in September, 1938. The latter figure reflected hurricane damage.

Bar Gold Steady

LONDON, Oct. 5 (AP)—Bar gold 168s, unchanged. (Equivalent $33.85 on basis of dollar at $4.03.)

Bar silver 21¼d, unchanged. (Equivalent 38.54 cents.)

AUSTEN LAKE

McKechnie Refuses To Blame Berger

NEW YORK, N. Y., Oct. 5.

THE NEW YORK YANKEES CELEBRATED their first World Series victory with deplorable calm, merely shucking off their uniforms and scratching their naked itches. A few paused to pump the hand of Red Ruffing, the winning pitcher, like house guests thanking their host for a lovely evening.

AUSTEN LAKE

A flock of cobblestone kids tried to stow away in the locker room but were shooed out by a benevolent attendant, so they pressed their noses against the outside windows, peeking through spots where the paint had peeled. All they saw was the Yankees sitting around in various stages of undress, scooping up ice cream from pasteboard cups and swiggling pop, which had been thoughtfully provided by Manager Joe McCarthy.

Joe, his jowls pink with pleasure but otherwise unruffled, retired to his corner cubbyhole and sat in his soggy undershirt, jotting down the batting order for tomorrow's contest until a spokesman for a knot of cameramen requested him, please, to form the central figure of a victory tableau.

Joe draped his arm over Ruffing's shoulder and beamed a grandpa smile on the pitcher, whose uniform was steaming with little eddies of condensed perspiration . . . "Something with a little snap . . ." repeated the cameraman, motioning some of the other Yankees into the semi-circle to stimulate jollity with pop bottles poised.

The ball authors had galloped down from the press peak to record any gems of wisdom that Joe might care to drop. But he said: "This isn't any novelty, is it?" and added: "Say it anyway you like." He was affable but courteously impatient to end the seance, which, after four years, had become boresome routine, and suggested that everybody wait until the series ended and then be his guests at a grand get-together in some downtown hot spot.

Bill McKechnie Unaffected

OVER IN THE OTHER CLUBHOUSE Bill McKechnie was practicing Christian Endeavor. Bill might have been screaming internally, but did it silently. So he put on a puss of a rural vicar and pretended to bless the players who have foozled him out of the ball game. Berger's bungled throw? Pshaw! A man's entitled to one of those once in a while.

Just the same, at the instant when Berger picked up the ball in the extreme corner, like a boy snatching a running rabbit by the ears, petted it a moment, and then wheeled to heave it at second base, instead of third, Bill was peering from the lip of his cave and he grabbed the top of his head like a man slugged with a beer mallet.

And when Joe Gordon scored, Bill staggered down the dugout steps like a hotel porter with a trunk on his back, holding his temples between spread fingers as though fearful that his cerebral juices might leak out. But now he said, in effect, "Shux! T'werent nawthin'." No? Not any more than a busted appendix!

What about Ivy Goodman's muff of Keller's triple in the fateful ninth? "Pardonable," said Bill. "Perfectly pardonable." Yet Ivy had trotted back with the dignified confidence of a head waiter beckoning a sucker party to a champagne supper, raising his hands in a Sunday roto pose—and the ball squirted out of his glove.

And before Ivy could decide which of the spots before his eyes was the ball, there was Keller, easy as a pickpocket, snug on third. "Pardonable," says Bill, but at the instant he had hung his chin over the dugout piperails as though the weight of woe was too much for one neck to support.

Rival Managers Gentlemen at All Times

McKECHNIE AND McCARTHY, whose lives have been curiously parallel, are both parlor types. They never rant or cuss. They say, "Please" and "Thank You" to the umpires. Still, I confess I like a little ructions with my baseball and recall how Mickey Cochrane had scrubbed his person in the Detroit shower room as though trying to rinse off defeat, and spouted scalding words on his playmates about their Narcissus complex.

Mike said this like a cow boss biting off verbal chews from rhetorical tobacco. And when he ran out of breath his boys were much rosier under the skins than mere soap and toweling should produce.

Other than the three scoring incidents, there was little to the opening game except the drab monotony of watching the Yankees fish for Paul Derringer's optical blurrs with their bats. There were no historical incidents to enliven World Series literature, no little museum bits worth filing away as mental curiosa.

Yankees Still a Money Club

DERRINGER LOST, BUT HE PITCHED WITH THE WELL-OILED precision of a knitting shuttle. Except for Berger's aberration in the fifth and Goodman's "pardonable" foozle in the ninth, it was like sitting in a surgical clinic watching an expert anesthetist etherize a patient.

Still Red Ruffing, neuralgic elbow and all, pitched a creditable ball game, too. And the Yankees' infield made three double plays in Richy spots.

And the Yankee base runners took advantage of their few breaks. So if World Series are old stuff to them at least familiarity hasn't bred contempt. They're still a "money" club.

WALTERS FACES YANKS; REDS STILL CONFIDENT

RED HOT ROOTER—Miss Page Crosley, daughter of Powel Crosley, owner of the Cincinnati Reds, was on hand to cheer daddy's team at the Yankee Stadium yesterday. She is typical of the Redlegs' fans who, though a bit down after the Yankee's 2 to 1 victory, have courage and were to be out again today screaming for the National Leaguers.

By JOE CASHMAN

NEW YORK, Oct. 5—The incredible New York Yankees were one game up in their struggle to win their fourth straight championship, but the challenging Reds from Cincinnati had fandom suspecting that maybe they'd make a battle of the 1939 World's Series as another 60,000 crowd stormed the stadium to watch Monte Pearson and "Bucky" Walters match flinging finesse in the second contest this P. M.

All of which must be set down as a remarkable accomplishment on the part of the National Leaguers.

For the first time in four autumns, the observers couldn't justly term the senior circuit representatives chicken-livered quitters after a Yankee win.

On the contrary, the Reds displayed so much courage and utter disregard for the Yanks reputation of invincibility in the opener that they'll have not a few votes to eventually triumph, if Walters can even the count by disposing of Pearson today.

It goes without saying, though that the Ohioans will be all but out of the running if they go two down. It's inconceivable their gameness or anything else can save them if Walters stumbles on the heels of Paul Derringer, who suffered a heart breaking defeat in the opener.

The climax of a Horatio Alger career, unparallelled in the majors, was reached when at 1:30 p. m. the announcer yelled, "Walters pitching for Cincinnati.

FAILED AS INFIELDER

Four years back, an infielder, who had failed to make the grade with the Red Sox and Bees and was saved from going back to the minors by what seemed a worse fate when the Phils grabbed him.

Today a pitcher who set the season's high in major league victories with a total of 27 and the hill hope of the scrappiest National League entry to compete in the classic since 1934.

That's the sensational saga of this tow-headed blond from Philadelphia.

League pilots that "Bucky" has more stuff than Derringer. They say he's just as fast and smart and that his side-arm "sinker" is harder to hit than anything Derringer throws.

The Yanks, of course, must be shown to be convinced. At the moment, they don't think any pitcher living could be more difficult to drive than was Derringer yesterday.

REDS CONVINCED ON RUFFING

The Reds, judging from what they saw of an allegedly sore-armed Ruffing in the opener, are also from Missouri when they're

Tufts Varsity Team Is Better Balanced For Grid Opener

By DAVE GLUECK

"Tufts will play better ball than last year, although a lack of substitute material may keep us from proving that by our game scores" said Jumbo coach, Lew Manly, as he put his boys through detail work in preparation for the Middlebury match on Saturday.

The Jumbos will start a capable veteran outfit; but if replacements have to be run in, they may change the club's complexion considerably.

At end, Manly has Mark Hanabury, former Weymouth all-scholastic, and Ned Smith. Both boys are playing their fourth year of college football, and have proved their ability to box tackles, help out in the air and turn back sweeps.

Neither wing, however, weighs over 165 pounds, and support will be needed at those posts during the long Saturday setto. Unfortunately, the replacements are very green, and thus far none has developed to the substitute stage.

TACKLE SITUATION O. K.

At tackle the situation is a little better. Ted Haselton, a junior, won recognition at Wakefield High, and with two years of varsity experience behind him, should have a good year. Ralph Sherry, heavyweight wrestler, holds down the partner place for his third year. Behind these aces are a couple of Jacks, only one of whom has had any experience, but both boys are trying and may develop ability.

The guards are well taken care of by four veterans, namely, George Bournazos, Ed Nalband, Burch Lorett and Bruce Russell. Bournazos, 190 pounder, may have to move to the pivot post, where he will be backed up by Fred Della Paolera. This will strengthen the vital zone considerably, but the guard squad will miss him.

The backfield is the strong spot in the Tufts story. Captain Art Griffin stood out at quarterback last year, working now with more seasoned material he will have a lot to do with Jumbo success.

Incidentally, Griffin illustrates the Tufts coaching technique. Few of the Manly men have played other than high school ball before entering college. Manly has to teach them most of the football they learn, and in doing so he often shuffles the boys around. Griffin was a guard at Medford High and a center at St. John's. He's running with the ball instead of in front of it and passing it forward instead of backward.

PATTERSON LOOKS GOOD

The rest of the veteran quartet is composed of West, Kenny and Patterson. West and Kenny are light but capable, Patterson who wasn't a regular at Somerville High, is now carrying his 180 pounds fast and hard.

He looks like a dangerous man at fullback. Besides his first four Manly has a good sophomore backfield. Of these Art Hodgson, 175 pound triple threat from Exeter shows most promise, although Rutter, Curtis, Manly (different) Richie and Flinn will all see action or visa versa.

Even John R. Tunis, in his perennial proselyte review, puts Tufts in the lily white class. There are those who think Tunis worked backward from the scores, calling teams with heavy win records pros and losers amateurs.

By any standard the Jumbos are playing for fun, not futures in the big leagues, and it's a change to see the boys working for exercise rather than the assembly line efficiency of some of the football factories.

Tufts only schedules the smaller schools and, wisely, doesn't try to climb out of its class.

Last year the Manly men lost six, tied one and won on. This year, with more experience, they hope to use their single wing system more smoothly and end the season in black figures.

Manly declares that this year he can balance his running attack with a potent aerial threat which may strapnel the opposition. If the boys can get started right in the Middlebury melee he looks for a good year.

Hanley to Use Two Backfields

Coach Pat Hanley is toying with the idea of using two complete backfields against Franklin and Marshall, Boston University's opening game foe at Fenway Park next Saturday afternoon.

In incoming Diplomats from Lancaster, Pa., employ a power backfield for the first and third periods to wear the opposition down and then come with a quartet of speed merchants in the second and fourth quarters figuring to run their rivals ragged.

The Terriers will start the game with George Pantano at quarterback, Jimmy Cassidy and Al Clark at the halfbacks, with Ralph Salvati at fullback. The second four will be Johnny Connearney, Charlie Thomas, Johnny Wedemeyer and Walter Williams.

In the first team Cassidy and Salvati will do the passing, while Salvati and Pantano will do the booting. In the second four, the passing will be handled by Wedemeyer and Williams and this same pair will also do the booting.

Archibald, Jeffra In Return Bout

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5 (INS)—A return match within 30 days between Champion Joey Archibald and Harry Jeffra for the featherweight crown was called for by the executive committee of the National Boxing Association.

In its ruling the committe said that the winner should then take on the "No. 1 challenger," Petey Scalzo, or the winner of the forthcoming bout between Scalzo and Simon Chavez.

ARMY HARRIERS WIN

WEST POINT, N. Y., Oct. 5 (AP)—Army harriers defeated Fordham over a four-mile course, 23 to 32. Cadet George Moore sprinted the last 200 yards to move from third to first place and win in the record time of 22 minutes and 15 seconds against a field of 23.

Yale Prepares For Columbia

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Oct. 5 (AP)—Yale's football team engaged in its final pre-game contact drill as it went about the business of preparing for its opening battle with Columbia in the Bowl Saturday. The Elis concentrated on perfecting a defense against the New Yorkers' plays.

Although Hank Wood, blocking back and Cape Burnam, veteran guard, remained on the sidelines due to injuries, Head Coach Ducky Pond said he expected the pair to be available for Saturday's tilt.

By JACK CONWAY

COACH EARL BLAIK of Dartmouth believes there is a definite place in football for little men . . . Blaik insists that small men put much more punch into their playing than some of the dreadnaughts.

"Every time they carry the ball, make a tackle or block, the lightweights seem to add an extra punch for good measure to back their cause," declared Blaik during a discussion with Robert "Whitey" Fuller, director of publicity at Hanover . . . "I have never been connected with a squad where the diminutive players did not day after day out-fight the heavyweights in everything they did."

Dartmouth has its share of small gridiron hopefuls this fall . . . They include Gus Zitrides, Warren King, Don Norton, quarterback; Joe Arice, sophomore halfback; Jack Orr, junior fullback and Henry Ingersoll, senior guard.

"I would say," asserted Coach Blaik, "that little men have a slight complex about their size, especially on the field with many squad mates who hover around the class of six footers . . . This complex makes them try harder and look better in comparison to the men without the driving force behind them."

You find the same condition in other branches of athletics . . . The Maranvilles, the Evers, the Millers, the Loughrans and the Stribhngs all had to display a little added intestinal fortitude when they went into action against men who outclassed them physically, but who often didn't posses the driving qualities necessary to win in athletics.

Dartmouth's football plans have been coming along smoothly . . . It will be a powerful Green team that invades the Stadium for the clash with Harvard on Oct. 28 . . . Dartmouth once more will be a favorite to win, and probably will do so.

California Trip for Hearst All-Americas

WITH A TRIP to California as an added inducement, it is expected that the Hearst All-America boxing tournament this year will be the greatest event of its kind . . . The trial contests will get under way at the Arena next month . . . The New England finals will be staged in the Garden on December 11, and the All-Eastern final in the Garden on December 18 . . . The survivors in the All-Eastern finals will journey to San Francisco the latter part of January to compete in the grand national final at San Francisco . . . The Coast trip will also include visits to Los Angeles and Hollywood . . . New England has some brilliant amateur boxers this year, and it is expected that several of them will win places on the Eastern team that will invade California.

Amateur boxing has been particularly successful in Boston during the past five years . . . The lack of attractive professional shows has caused the fans to turn to the simon pure game which has produced intensified action and some good boxing . . . The weekly tournaments already conducted by the Irish American A. C. have proved that this Fall's crop of amateur boxers is better than ever . . . This means that the Hearst All-America shows will continue to establish dizzy heights in the matter of competition and attendance . . . Last year 50,000 persons attended the various All-America bouts held in this city . . . Boston and Detroit have already staged grand national finals, and now San Francisco will have its turn to be host to the carefree simon pure punchers.

Bees End Season In the Black

THE BEES ended their season in the black financially, according to a statement made to this writer by Leo Goulston, the club's vice president . . . Leo says the Bees drew large crowds on the road, and this accounted for the financial success of the men of Casey . . . Injuries to Tony Cuccinello and Eddie Miller proved costly to the club's chances . . . Next year the Bees plan to have sufficient replacements to safeguard them in the event their stars meet with mishaps . . . No ball club is any stronger than its secondary defense . . . The Sox also operated at a profit.

Henry Chmielewski, Polish middleweight, is a man without a country now that Hitler and Stalin have gobbled up Polahd . . . Chmielewski came to this country from Warsaw, and since his arrival has won 14 bouts.

"While my country was at war, I didn't wish to apply for American citizenship," stated Chmielewski, "as I wanted to return home and fight with my countrymen . . . Now that Poland is no more I would like to become an American citizen."

Johnny Buckley is back in town from Portland where he signed contracts for Honey Mellody's defense of his New England lightweight title against Paul Junior in a Maine city ring on October 12 . . . It will be the first New England title match in Maine since a Boxing Commission took over the control of boxing in the Pine Tree State . . . Paul Junior has won his last three bouts by knockouts, and is confident he will conquer Mellody . . . Paul Junior has engaged in more than 300 bouts in his long ring career, and saved $50,000 which he invested in Portland real estate.

Random Shots at Target

THE HOLY CROSS-Louisiana game at Worcester on Saturday will play to a capacity crowd . . . Coming to town in two airplanes, Louisiana has a colorful outfit that will put on a real show . . . Holy Cross, on the strength of its brilliant game against Manhattan, is a favorite to win . . . The presence of Captain Torby Macdonald in the Harvard lineup on Saturday will make the opening game of the season against Bates more attractive . . . Macdonald and Foley were the spark plugs in recent Harvard games against Yale.

B. C. FIT FOR NIGHT BATTLE

Only Frank Davis, Dave Lucey, Tony Tassinari, Frank Maznicki and Tom Powers remain as question marks. Davis injured his hip in the first period of the Lebanon opener last week, and the member has been show in mending.

CHANCE FOR KISSELL

Lucey, Tassinari, Maznicki and Powers, all of whom missed last Saturday's clash, have been in uniform all week. None of them has done any strenuous work, but they'll probably all play Sriday, because Leahy wants them to get the feel of actual battle.

If Davis is held out, Kissell, third string fullback, will be in the starting lineup. Otherwise the eleven will be the same which went into action last week.

Kissell, like Davis, a sophomore will give Nashua, N. H., one-half representation in the Eagle starting backfield. Bob Jauron, left halfback is the other Granite state lad in the starting four.

Teamed with Kissell and Jauron in the backfield will be Ed Cowhig, quarterback and Lou Montgomery, right halfback. That's the "B" unit. The "A" group, Henry Toczylowski, Charlie O'Rourke, Vito Ananas and Pete Cignetti, as was the case last week, will hear the starting whistle from the bench

ST. JOSEPH'S SQUAD HERE

Tomorrow's line from right end to left, the same as last week's will read GeneGoodreault, Al Morro, Dave White, Chet Gladchuk, Capt Ernie Schwotzer, Joe Manzo, and Dick Harrison.

Veteran Players Lead Rookies

NEW YORK, Oct. 5 (AP)—Veterans of the National Football League forged ahead of all but one of the rookies as players from the Chicago Bears and Cleveland continued to monopolize the race for individual honors in the third week of play, the statistics revealed.

Parker Hall, Cleveland freshman, held his own as the leading forward passer. The former Mississippi All-American back has completed 32 out of 52 passes for 443 yards, an efficiency of 61.5 per cent. Bernie Masterson, Chicago Bears' veteran, and Jack Robbins, ex-Arkansas star with the Cardinals, moved into second and third place, respectively.

Most spectacular rise was that of Joe Maniaci of the Bears, who became the leading ground gainer with a total of 250 yards, almost half of Whizzer White's total as the circuit's leader for the entire season last year.

Behind him rank Dave Smukler of Philadelphia with 190 yards, John Pingel, Michigan State's all-America rookie with Detroit, with 159 and Bill Osmanski, Bears' rookie from Holy Cross with 148 yards.

John Drake of Cleveland took over scoring honors with four touchdowns for 24 points, four more than Maniaci and Bill Smith of the Cardinals. Dick Plasman of the Bears and Vic Spaddaccini of Cleveland are tied for first in pass receiving with 10 catches each.

VOLATION OUT FRONT

DANBURY, Ct., Oct. 5 (AP)—Volation, with its owner, Dr. W. F. Vail of Greenwich, driving, took top honors as the Danbury Fair harness racing program, twice postponed du eto weather, got under way.

AS YANKS TOOK FIRST CONTEST FROM REDS

ALL-AMERICA FAN—White-suited Harry Thobe goes into action to cheer Reds on to victory—but to no avail. Thobe started rooting for Reds 40 years ago, but nobody can figure out why.

FIRST RUN—Ival Goodman scores in fourth inning, first run of World Series. Reds' right fielder walked, stole second, scored on Frank McCormick's single. This tally looked like the goods to the Red Legs with Derringer burning them in. Frey's poor throw to the plate in an attempt to get Gordon later in the game put the Yanks on even terms. How they scored the winning run in the ninth inning to win, 2 to 1, is history.

International News Photograph Service

HE'S SAFE—Ival Goodman safe at second in fourth inning after stealing second. He scored a moment later when Frank McCormick singled. But Yanks came on to win, 2-1, in ninth.

RINGSIDER — Lou Gehrig, former Yankee "IRON HORSE," plays unaccustomed role of spectator at first World Series game. Lou's an infantile paralysis victim, or so medicos say.

SAFE—Joe DiMaggio safe at first after an attempted pickoff, Lombardi to McCormick. It was close, though. Joe was lucky to get on, being credited with a hit when his weak roller down the third base line stayed in safe territory.

HE'S OUT — Ernie Lombardi, "big gun" of the Cincy Reds, stretches to make first base in series opener . . . but it's no use. Dahlgren of the Yanks has just touched first base and Ernie's headed for the bench.

Ruffing's Conquest Sets Series Mark

By BILL CORUM

NEW YORK, Oct. 5—"Red" saw the Reds—and raised 'em. Doing what no pitcher had ever done before, "Red" Ruffing set the Cincinnati Reds down with four hits in the World Series and beat them 2 to 1.

Having won the last game of the 1938 series from the Chicago Cubs, the big, smiling Nokomis, Ill., miner, therefore became the first pitcher ever to win two classic games in a row. What a pitcher? What a money player!

RUFFING STEADY

Hooked with Paul Derringer, who matched him pitch for pitch until the ninth, while close to 60,000 persons sat through a clearing afternoon, "Old Ruffing ready" never wavered, never faltered, never gave the faintest indication at any time that he meant to accept defeat.

It was really a triumph for Field Marshal Joe McCarthy's biggest battery, for Ruffing's catcher, Bill Dickey, fired home the winning run in the last inning with a blasting single to center that she the champions on the way again.

Charlie Keller, a freshman, but no green hand with a bat among the champion Yankees, rolled across from third on Dickey's hit.

He had carried himself to the hot corner on a triple that just escaped the clutching hands of Ival Goodman, with one away in the fatal frame.

PITCHES TO DICKEY

Faced with this desperate emergency in a game that had been anybody's through eight and one-half brisk and brilliant innings, Deacon Bill McKechnie, skipper of the Reds, scarcely seemed to know what to say.

Perhaps the safest thing would have been: "Let us pray."

Anyhow, the Deacon ordered DiMaggio passed, indicating that he was going to fill them up for a play at any base, and then directed Derringer to pitch to Dickey.

That's like passing up arsenic to take a chance on cyanide. For the cool Arkansas marksman, sharpshooter of all the sharpshooters, met Derringer's third pitch on the trademark and the first game of what is certain to be a great series was history.

High Court Rules for Reds In Law Suit

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 5 (AP)—Although the Cincinnati Reds lost the opening game of the World Series they won a case in the Ohio Supreme Court.

The tribunal refused to grant an appeal to Margaret Ivory in her suit for damages against the baseball club because she was hit by a foul ball while a spectator at a Reds-Chicago Cubs game in 1935.

The Hamilton County Common Pleas Court had awarded her $1600 damages, but the Appellate Court had reversed and rendered final judgment for the ball club.

Final Workout For Jumbo Squad

This afternoon marks the final workout for the Tufts gridmen before their opening with Middlebury on Saturday. Coach Lew Manly will stress aerials and punting as he feels that these two departments will work to better advantage than power plays by the regular line backed by a light backfield quarter.

Bill Harrison, a sophomore from Somerville, has won first-string rating by means of his forward passing, and teaming up with Capt. Art Griffin with his long punts, the backfield offense seems set to go places.

Butch Keeling Hunts for Talent

NEW YORK, Oct. 5 (AP)—Melville (Butch) Keeling, who signed this week as playing manager of the Kansas City Greyhounds of the American Hockey Association, left for Toronto with Lester Patrick, manager of the New York Rangers, in search of hockey talent.

Keeling said he planned to negotiate with several players in Toronto, visit the New York Americans' training camp at Port Arthur, Ont., and the Rangers' training school at Winnipeg, which begins Monday.

CORNELL CAPTAIN AILING

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Oct. 5 (AP)—Bill Shek, Wilbur Fay and Jack Hinkle were alternated at right halfback in Syracuse's varsity, in case Gene Hopkins, sophomore star, is not ready to start against Cornell Saturday at Ithaca. Hopkins was at practice again for the second day, but unable to join in the drills.

ITHACA, N. Y., Oct. 5 (AP)—Carl Snavely, Cornell coach, announced that Mort Landsberg would be the starting fullback against Syracuse after the big Red varsity had gone through a slambang goal line scrimmage against the seconds. Injured Captain Vince Eichler was admitted to the infirmary for observation.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Oct. 5 (AP)—Fleet Tom Harmon ran 90 and 35 yards for touchdowns as Michigan's varsity scrimmaged the freshman team in the last stiff drill before the Michigan State game Saturday before an expected crowd of 75,000.

Noted Exhibitors In Hub Horse Show

New faces among the exhibitors and entries unfamiliar to previous Boston Horse Show galleries will make the 12th annual event, opening a week from tonight, unusually interesting for spectators at Commonwealth Armory next week.

An entry from Maine in the New England saddle horse class has aroused considerable tack room gossip. This performer is Viking, owned by Mrs. Lewis J. Sheaffer of Gardiner, Me. Miss Barbara Hutchins and Miss Hope Wheeler, also from Gardiner, will ride in the horsemanship events, with the latter being entered for the Good Hands Cup.

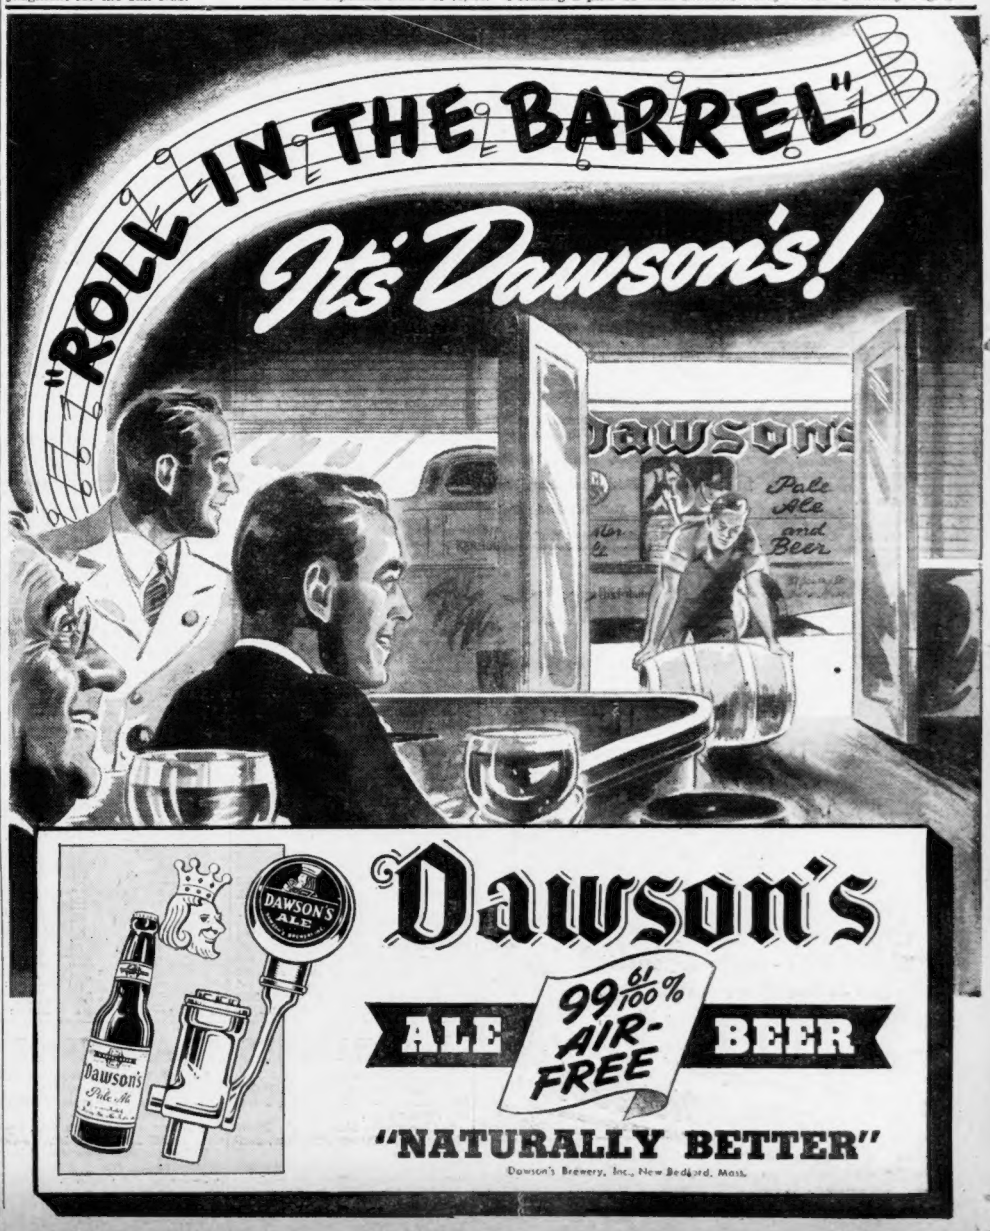
From other New England states, Miss Joan G. Houston of Brattleboro, Vt., in the Good Hands Cup; Mrs. Carl W. Corliss of Sunapee, N. H., with two horses, and Martin Nelson of Providence with three horses, add uncertainty to the judging because of making their initial appearance in the 110th Cavalry classic.

Mrs. Corliss will show a road hack, Temptation, and an open jumper, King Tutt, while Martin is sending a pair of black saddlers, Joan Heather and Midnight King, and another saddler, Rainbow Rise.

Well known in national tennis circles and at leading dog shows, Miss Katherine Winthrop of Hamilton will make her Armory debut as an equestrienne. Her mounts will be the hunters, Allouette and Triplex.

Salem Legion Post Stages 'Pure' Show

After a lapse of four years, the Salem American Legion, Post 23, will revive amateur boxing at the North street Arena, Salem, on Thursday night, Oct. 12. Present plans call for the shows to be held every other Thursday night.



Dorchester, Trade Lightest in Years

By MICHAEL GILLOOLY

If all that you read in the papers is true, Dorchester and Trade school elevens—for years reputedly the heaviest clubs in the city ranks—were to send their lightest outfits in a decade to the Bee Hive gridiron this afternoon for the opening contest of the second doubleheader in as many days.

In the nightcap of the Joe McKenney double feature, Roslindale was slated to pull weeds against Charlestown's traditionally weak football crew.

Coach Bill Pendergast, suffering from the loss of six candidates expected to take over first string positions, was to unveil his 1939 outfit, Trade having already tasted an embarrassing overdose of competition last week end.

Of the half dozen scratched entries of the Red and Black A. C., only one was in uniform. George Ramscorti, counted on earlier to be at a tackle slot because of his experience last season, was forced to take a place on the bench, while Johnny Drier and Bob Moore have practically abandoned hopes. Three others still remain on the ineligible list.

DORCHESTER FAVORITE

But in spite of these losses, Dorchester was a slight favorite to make its debut most successful, with the Traders in the role of victims.

Co-Capt. Henry Aleo, a triple threat back, was to call the signals for Russ and Charlie Mason at the halfbacks and John Donohue at full.

Pendergast's starting was to have Ed Lally and Robert Cleary at the ends; Co-Capt. Marty Concannon and Bill Whelan, tackles, and Paul Thornton and Nate Lenson, a pair of veterans, at the guards.

Bill Hamrock got the call over John Henderson at the pivot post. Coach Harry Tilton's Trade School had Frank McManus at quarter, Frank Grinnell and Mike Maclone at the halves, and Chet Gromberg full. Maclone and Gromberg, veterans and co-captains, were to take care of the kicking and passing assignments.

MISS DEGUTIS

The forward wall, without Capt. Johnny DeGutis at end, who has not reported back to school, will have George Rubino and Gerry Police on the wings; Bob Cofran and Bob Jackson, tackles; James Allera and George Ivas, guards, with Bud Walsh at center.

An interesting feature that was to have developed was the battle at the tackles. Concannon and Whelan of Dorchester weighed in close to the 200-pound mark against 215 for Jackson and 190 for Cofran. A real heavyweight battle was in the making.

Veteran Fran Fay in the Roslindale backfield and the Charlestown reputation for weakness tilted the scales to the Fred Murray side for the favoritism. Both clubs were green with the breaks in the game probably deciding the winner.

Fay, an end last year, was moved to the backfield to team with Ed Lachinsky, Bob Styles and Ray Smith, but Coach Murray promised that there would be a parade of substitutes before the final whistle.

MURRAY'S LINEUP

Frank Ash, a newcomer, was expected to start at right halfback, balancing Bob White, with Dan "Snuffy" Kent calling signals. Dave Myers was in the fullback post.

Berger Absolved For Reds Defeat

informed that Monte Pearson is generally credited with having a more varied and baffling assortment than "Big C."

Yet such is the case. American League rivals are unanimous in their opinion that on certain afternoons Pearson is the No. 1 pitcher of all times.

The only weak spot in the armor of this 30-year-old Californian is that he's as inconsistent as he is great.

There's never any telling when he'll be in the mood to pitch. He probably suffers more from ailments, real and imaginary, than any three other players in the business.

There's no reason, however, for the Reds expecting that maybe Monte will have one of his off days this p. m. For, if he does, it will be the first time in his World's Series career.

He's always been immense in classic competition, having easily won his only start in each of the past three fall engagements.

REDS BANK ON WALTERS

Still, nobody can blame the Reds if they enter the fray confident that Monte won't show them any more than did Ruffing and equally confident that Walters will triumph in his first series appearance if he comes close to matching Derringer's performance of yesterday.

It wasn't of today's twirlers, however, that the customers were talking as they flocked to the "house that Ruth built" for the second game.

Everybody and his brother was still discussing the pros and cons of the opener. In fact, that game will be hashed and re-hashed until another series rolls around. It was that sort of dramatic fray.

All agreed that Ruffing and Derringer furnished the most sensational and superb pitching duel in the post-war history of the series. The box score proved that Ruffing allowed only four singles, one of them a scratch, issued but one walk, fanned five and faced only three Reds in each of the last five innings.

Derringer, short-circuited Yankee power with five hits, fanned seven, issued not a walk except an intentional one to DiMaggio in the ninth and set batters down in order from the fifth to the ninth.

YANKS' INFIELD TOPS

Everybody agreed that the play of the Yankee infield demonstrated very closely that McCarthy's current quartet is entitled to be rated with such immortal foursomes as Chance, Evers, Tinker and Steinfeldt, McInnis, Collins, Barry and Baker and Kelley, Frisch, Bancroft and Groh.

But there agreement ended and argument started.

Did Wally Berger pull the "boner" of the century in the fatal fifth?

The majority, including the writer, would reply in the affirmative. Manager Bill McKechnie chips in with a negative vote, in the same breath he censures Lonnie Frey's efforts on the play and also asserts Ival Goodman should have caught Charlie Keller's ninth inning triple.

Let's review the Berger play.

The Reds were leading, 1 to 0, Goodman had drawn Ruffing's only pass with one gone in the fourth, had stolen second with the aid of a poor throw by Dickey, and had scampered home when Frank McCormick laced out a second straight single to left.

With two gone in the fifth, Joe Gordon singled. Then Derringer made his one bad pitch of the game. He let Babe Dahlgren, weakest-hitting Yankee regular, to smash a hot grounder over third.

GORDON ON HIS WAY

Berger grabbed the ball after it had caromed off a left field box near the foul stick. By now Gordon was flying towards third and Dahlgren was within a few strides of second.

Not even a Di Maggio gun could have nipped Dahlgren, yet Wally, with a glass arm, made the throw to second.

Immediately on seeing this, Art Fletcher, coaching at third, gave Gordon the sign to continue on past the hot corner to the plate.

Frey got Berger's throw and pegged to the plate. The ball beat the runner, but the throw forced Lombardi to reach high for the ball and he was a split-second late in trying to get it down on Gordon.

"I find no fault with Berger's judgment," McKechnie says. "It was Frey's throw which let the run score."

We must disagree. Berger and Lombardi were the culprits in our book.

Wally had no business throwing behind the winning run with his poor arm. Every rule in the book called for him to get that ball in toward the plate to make sure Gordon wouldn't advance beyond third.

LOMBARDI SLOW

And if Lombardi weren't the most awkward catcher in the world, he'd have saved Berger's hide by nailing the runner in spite of the high throw. With a Lopez or Dickey catching, Gordon would have been an easy out.

Moving on to the ninth.

Maybe Goodman should have caught Keller's drive but we thought he did well to come as close as he did, which was to tick the ball with his finger tips.

With the winning run on third with one gone, Di Maggio, naturally, was passed. But Bill Dickey wasn't. He was allowed to hit and he cracked a single to center.

Why wasn't Dickey also passed filling the bases and setting the stage for a possible force play at the plate?

Yet it's easy to find excuses for the McKechnie strategy.

McKECHNIE GAMBLING

He was gambling on getting the slow-footed Dickey to roll into a double play. He thought this a wiser course than to try to get Selkirk, next batter, to hit in such a way that a drawn-in infield could cut the run down at the plate.

American Leaguers, rating Dickey probably the greatest clutch hitter in the league, would have pitched to Selkirk, but McKechnie had fairly sound reason for his decision.

It's our idea, that even if the Reds had pulled out of that ninth, they'd have been beaten finally. The fifth inning beat them.

Up to then, they oozed confidence and the Yanks seemed bewildered. Thereafter, the Bombers began to click and the Rhinelanders never threatened.

True, the Reds may feel proud of their showing, tossing out that fifth, but the Yanks too, are entitled to have more faith in their ability to retain their throne than they had entering the engagement.

For, on this occasion, they beat scientific, tight-lipped, defensive National League ball by playing just that kind of ball.

In short, they beat the Reds at their own game.

So how they're going to be dethroned, unless the Reds suddenly perform the miracle of beating them at American League wild and woolly ball, is beyond us.

Joe Osmanski Faster Than Famous Brother

When Louisiana State makes the longest plane hop in Southern football history to play Holy Cross on Saturday it will bring on three men who played high school football together.

They are Ashford Simes, left halfback; Young Bussey, quarterback, and Woodrow Barrett, end, all of whom played on the same team at San Jacinto High at Houston, Tex

Strangely enough, Simes was Bussey's substitute at high school, a role he also played at L. S. U. until this season. Now his proficiency as a passer has resulted in Bussey being shifted to blocking back to make room for Simes in the varsity backfield. He was the Southern Conference's leading passer in 1938.

Holy Cross is unable to present a threesome of varsity men who played scholastic ball together, but in Fred Kidd and Bill Sheridan they have two sophomores who starred in the state champion backfield at Melrose High two years ago.

And, of course, the Osmanski tradition at Holy Cross is being carried on in spectacular manner by Joe. Several critics who saw him contribute two of Holy Cross' four touchdowns against Manhattan last week felt he was even faster than Bullet Bill, '38 All-America fullback.
